Doughton Sees Trouble With Tax Bill

House Unit Chairman Will Not Be Bound By Treasury's 12 Billion Estimate

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee served notice yesterday that he will not be bound by the Treasury's preliminary 12-billion-dollar estimate of new taxes "or any other tax goal" in shaping the next revenue bill.

"We are going to raise what revenue we reasonably can without breaking anybody's back or shattering industry," said Doughton. "That might be six or seven billion dollars or it might be only three or four billion. I'm not setting any amount."

Doughton arrived in Washington yesterday for an informal tax talk with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, following reports that presentation of the Treasury's new tax recommendations to the Ways and Means Committee may be delayed beyond September 8.

Confers With Stam

The House Ways and Means chairman conferred yesterday with Colin F Stam, staff chief of the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue, and is expected to see Morgenthau today.

Both joint committee and Treasury experts have been working up plans for tapping new billions in revenue. Morgenthau said last week that the Treasury program is still in the study stage and "fluid."

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau meanwhile backed up President Roosevelt's request for a "truly stiff" program of taxes and savings by releasing charts illustrating the higher impact of taxes in Canada and the United Kingdom and direct relation of taxes to the

Capital Is Next On 'Saturation' Raid Schedule, Germans Fear

BULLETIN

London, (Tuesday), Aug. 3 (AP).—R. A. F. heavy bombers, after two nights of inactivity, renewed their assaults on Germany last night, the British announced today.

The aerial offensive was kept going in daylight yesterday as United States medium bombers struck at Nazi airfields at Merville and St. Omer in France. The American raiders returned home without the loss of a plane.

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, Aug. 2.—Allied bombing blows at German cities, particularly Hamburg, pushed the Italian crisis out of the public mind in Germany as Dr. Robert Ley, leader of the German Labor Front, gloomily asserted there is nothing to do but "fight to the finish."

"The Nation is bound irrevocably to national socialism . . . wherever the party steers the ship of state; if it sinks, all must drown—there is no escape," he added.

(German authorities were reported speeding the evacuation of all non-essential civilians from Berlin today as Germans took for granted that the city would be next on the Allied blitz list. Advices to Stockholm from Berlin said leaflets were being circulated instructing women, children and elderly people to find homes with relatives outside the capital or go to special evacuation areas prepared in eastern Germany.)

German newspapers admitted the reality and horror of the bombing at Hamburg surpassed "every report, every letter and every imagining possible." Berlin newspapers no longer spoke of courage but said merely, "The danger cannot be escaped and therefore must be faced."

30,542 Casualties in Hamburg

Stockholm, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Aftontidningen, in a dispatch from Zurich, today quoted Hamburg police as saying 30,542 persons were killed, wounded or missing in the bomb-battered north German port.

Not a single building was spared some damage, the report added.

Casualties were listed as totaling 8347 killed, 18,681 wounded and 3514 missing.

Europe Will Fall Like Sicily Did, Elmer Davis Says On African Radio

By the Associated Press

Algiers, Aug. 2.—Promising the people of occupied countries and the Axis a "great invasion" of the European Continent from England, Director Elmer Davis of the Office of War Information, in a radio broadcast, said the United States would fight "until the last of our enemies are beaten down."

Coming here from Britain, Davis spoke on the Algiers radio, and made clear he was speaking "to our allies in the nations that are going to be liberated and to the enemy."

England, he told them, is now a base of "a great and growing offensive" and no longer the scene of "heroic defense."

"From England will some day come that great invasion which will prove that the Festung of Europa (European fortress) was no more invulnerable than was the Festang of Sicily," he asserted.

Warning the inhabitants of German cities still only slightly scarred by bombings that their turn would come, Davis held out to the Czechs, Norwegians, Poles and Greeks serving the Allied cause the prospect that a "just vengeance will surely fall."

If there are still Germans who love freedom, he declared, "let them show their feelings by their actions in time. Mere words after they've lost the war will not be enough."

Turning to the Italians, he told them that if they wanted to regain "their honored place among the nations of the world, the first thing to do is to throw out the Germans.

"Now Mussolini has gone," he added, "but the Germans are still there."

Yanks Drive Ahead

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Aug. 2.—The Allies were launched tonight upon a final big offensive to wipe out the cornered Axis troops still resisting in Sicily, and simultaneously they resumed pounding the Italian mainland by air and by sea and warned the Italian population by radio that Allied invasion of the Italian mainland itself would begin "soon.'"

Announcement that the final Sicilian push was on was made here at headquarters today.

San Stefano, northern anchor of the Axis Mount Etna line, fell without a fight to Gen. George S. Patton's American Seventh Army. It was one of a dozen towns captured. Mistretta, 6 miles south, yielded 10,000 prisoners, most of them Germans, to run the captive bag above 90,000.

The British Eighth Army stormed into the defenses of Catania on the German-Italian left, shattering German counterattacks with heavy losses.

Canadians Push Forward

In the center, the Canadians pushed steadily forward through furious opposition in tortuous terrain, sometimes rising half a mile above sea level. On all sectors, Allied headquarters reported progress.

Sky-ruling Allied air fleets ranged up the bomb-worn Italian boot as far at Naples to deliver a devastating Flying Fortress raid. Fleet units steamed under the muzzles of Italian shore batteries to bombard the ports of Crotone and Vibo Valentia Marina and a railway bridge crossing the Oliva River. Off the north coast of Sicily, American naval units shelled the retreating Germans as a heavy curtain of artillery fire picked to pieces one enemy defense position after another.

Right Flank Shattered

The fanfare with which Allied headquarters announced the opening of the concerted drive against Sicily indicated that Gen. Dwight J. Eisenhower was confident that the end was in sight for Sicily. The enemy had been forced into an area smaller than Cap Bon in Tunisia, where he made his last disastrous stand in Africa. More than four fifths of Sicily was in Allied hands; the Germans holdings and manpower was steadily shrinking.

The fall of San Stefano shattered the German right flank. The Germans pulled out before the Ameri-

Official Order For Drafting of Fathers Issued

To Start October 1; 300,000 Expected To Go This Year

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

October 1 was officially established yesterday as the date to begin drafting pre-Pearl Harbor fathers for military service.

Instructions sent to local draft boards by Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey directed them to call fathers "only in such number as is absolutely required by a local board to meet a monthly call from the armed forces that cannot be filled from men, other than fathers, who are not eligible for occupational deferment."

Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt emphasized at a press conference that the number of fathers to be taken would depend to a large extent on the number of casualties and other factors requiring replacements for men now in the armed forces. However, it was estimated unofficially that 300,000 out of the six and a half million fathers in the 18-through-37 draft age bracket probably will be called before the end of the year.

625,000 Men Needed

According to figures provided by McNutt, 625,000 able-bodied men will be needed to fill calls in October, November and December. About 150,000 will be provided as youths reach 18 years of age. An estimated additional 175,000 may come from reclassification of 4-F's—those deferred because of physical disability—and from expiration of occupational deferments.

This would leave 300,000, or about 100,000 a month to be filled

See DRAFT, Page 4, Col. 3.

D. C. Fathers May Not Face Call 1st Month

District Selective Service headquarters disclosed yesterday that they may not have to draft any fathers to fill October calls, although they acknowledged that it would be a "squeak" getting by. Induction of some fathers in November appeared definitely assured, however, they said.

Approximately 50,000 eligible fathers are registered in the District, including 35,000 whites and 15,000 Negroes. No estimates were available on the number who would be found physically fit, however.

Lanham Act Funds To Finance Center Near Union Station

Allotment of $325,000 in Lanham Act funds to provide rest and recreation facilities for transient servicemen within a block of Union Station was approved yesterday by Baird Snyder, acting for Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, administrator of the Federal Works Agency.

Exact site of the building, a two-story temporary structure of the type now found on the Mall, has not been decided, Snyder declared, but three locations are being considered and one will be decided upon immediately.

The project will accommodate 250 persons simultaneously and will have cots, showers, washrooms, shaving facilities, a lounge, a canteen for sandwiches and coffee, and ample space for checking and storage.

"It is not typical of most servicemen's recreation centers," Snyder said. "We want it to be used by men who are stopping over for a few hours in between trains. For that reason there will be big, comfortable deck chairs for resting purposes on the first floor and cots, not beds, on the second. We don't want it to serve as headquarters for a man on a three-day pass, because many other agencies are equipped to provide that. This building is for the poor kids who hitherto have had to sprawl in the waiting room at Union Station while they waited for trains."

The War Hospitality Committee made the recommendation for the center following an extensive survey of servicemen's needs in the

Crew Attempts To Sink U-Boat

Moscow, Aug 2 (AP).—The Moscow radio today reported a shakeup of German commanders of Norwegian submarine bases after what it said was an attempt by one crew to sink its U-boat rather than put out to sea.

Quoting a Tass agency dispatch from Stockholm, the broadcast said that several sailors had been court-martialed as a result.

U. S. Pilot Travels Faster Than Sound In Five-Mile Dive

London, Aug. 2 (AP).—An American test pilot in England traveling faster than sound, or more than 780 miles an hour, has made a vertical dive of almost 5 miles, believed to be the longest in aviation history, it was announced tonight.

The flier, Lieut. Col. Cass S. Hough of Plymouth, Mich., technical director of the Eighth Fighter Command, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross by Brig. Gen. Frank O'D. Hunter, European commander of fighting planes, for special attainment in "independent flight research."

He made two record dives, one in September, 1942, when he took a P-38 Lightning up to 43,000 feet and nosed it into a power-dive for 25,000 feet—almost 5 miles—before leveling off at about 18,000 feet. In February, 1943, he went up to 39,000 feet in a P-47 Thunderbolt and dived to 18,000 feet.

Sweden Halts Nazi Troop Passage

Max Stephan's Pal Again Flees Camp

Gravenhurst, Ontario, Aug. 2 (AP). Peter Krug, German prisoner of war who was befriended by the Detroit restaurant owner Max Stephan and who testified against him later at Stephan's treason trial, was reported tonight to have made another escape from prison camp.

Krug, a lieutenant and bomber pilot who has escaped several times before, was swimming with fellow prisoners at an officers' camp in the Gravenhurst district today and did not report at roll-call afterward. If he fled the camp, it probably was in swimming shorts.

German Radio Says Reds Are Already in Orel

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), Aug. 3.—The Berlin radio was heard announcing today that the big Russian offensive against the Eastern Front bastion of Orel had carried the Red army into the city itself, and although indications were that the broadcast might be in error, it appeared the Nazis were preparing to give up Orel to the Soviet forces closing in from seven directions.

The German radio as heard by several London morning newspapers and the Reuters news agency said: "The center of fighting was in the Orel area. The enemy attacked with great violence, especially in the southwestern part of the town."

Although this same quotation was heard by severaul listeners, there was no other confirmation and it seemed that the announcer may have made a slip of the tongue or read a faulty English translation while intending to say that fighting was especially heavy southwest of Orel.

The Berlin radio, appearing to be preparing the home front for the loss of city, broadcast a front-line dispatch saying the army had protected the hinterland and enabled the German command to "erect new defenses which will stand up to all future Soviet attacks. In the disengagement movements which have been carried out, certain territory had to be given up, but nothing fell into Soviet hands undamaged."

Hard-Fighting Yanks Push Nearer Munda

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Tuesday), Aug. 3.—American ground forces drove forward 500 to 1200 yards along the Munda, New Georgia, front yesterday as Allied artillery for the first time brought the Japanese base at Salamaua, New Guinea, under fire.

Reports from the South Pacific command of Admiral William F. Halsey, jr., gave no details about the first gains against the Munda air base recorded in several days, except that "considerable quantities of material" had been captured.

Progress through the almost impenetrable jungle surrounding the airfield has been extremely difficult. Tanks and flamethrowers were sent against the enemy last week and were believed to have contributed substantially to the new advances.

The artillery fire on Salamaua was directed at the airdrome there. Planes caught on the ground were destroyed, a 60-foot section of the Francisco River bridge was knocked out, and hits were scored on antiaireraft batteries.

Matching the intensified ground attacks on Munda, American Army and Navy planes delivered punishing blows at the enemy's base on nearby Bougainville Island. One large freighter-transport was set afire, a tanker was hit and eight barges were sunk.

The artillery bombardment of the Salamaua airdrome was accompanied by a heavy bomber assault on the town. Flying Fortress-

Soviet Warned of Nazi Attack

The Germans had watched Stalin bidding Matsuoka goodby with glittering eyes that afternoon, as though they were fascinated, and with good reason. For exactly one week before, on Sunday, April 6, Stalin had concluded a pact of friendship with Yugoslavia, on the very day that Germany invaded that country. As it later developed, that pact was instrumental in convincing Hitler that the Soviet Union intended to invade Germany and western Europe, and that he must himself invade Russia first, before turning anew against England. Those who knew the inside story of that pact, however, realized that such was not the case; that it was a very timid gesture indeed.

In the beginning, the Russians proposed a pact of friendship and neutrality. It would have been strange, had they intended to enforce the pact with armed action, to insist as they did on a clause of neutrality. The Yugoslavs, however, held out for a pact of friendship, without mention of neutrality. During the night of April 5, the Yugoslav minister, Milan Gavrilovich, talked repeatedly by telephone to Belgrade, in the hours just before that capital was blasted by German bombs, obtaining authorization to sign the final text from which the Russians agreed to drop the neutrality clause. The Germans actually intercepted these conversations at Budapest, and published some of them—but conveniently left out all mention of the Russian desire for neutrality.

Then the Russians insisted that the pact be dated April 5, the day before the German attack on Yugoslavia, although Gavrilovich and his staff did not go to the Kremlin until 1:30 a. m., April 6, and stayed there until 7 a. m., when German planes were already over Belgrade and German troops were marching into Yugoslavia. The seemingly unimportant difference in dates was very important in that it left the Russians a loophole to slip away from any German charges that they had signed with an actual enemy of the Reich. On the day the pact was dated, Yugoslavia and Germany still maintained diplomatic relations.

But this period of apparent Soviet independence of Germany was shortlived. The Russians had miscalculated the strength of the Balkans and had expected the erection there of a front against Germany. When it failed to materialize, they crawled quickly back into their shell. Here, again, it was the Yugoslav Legation which played the leading role.

Soon after the signing of the Soviet-Yugoslav pact, the German Ambassador, Graf Friedrich Werner von der Schulenburg, went to Berlin for consultation. He returned to Moscow in time for the May Day parade, Soviet Russia's last Red Square spectacle before the war. It was a brilliant display, but Graf von der Schulenburg had

Allies Warn Swiss Against Letting Nazis Use Railways

London, Aug. 2.—The United States and Britain recently delivered a friendly warning to Switzerland against allowing the Germans to use Swiss railroads between the Reich and Italy, trustworthy American sources said today.

There are eight such railways and in the present circumstances they acquire vital importance. Otherwise the Nazis possess only a rail line through the Brenner Pass, with limited carrying capacity.

If Italian soil becomes a battleground, the railroads leading from Germany toward Italy across Switzerland would be a tempting channel for transporting German troops and war material.

Restaurants Ordered to Cut Out All Frills, Culinary Flourishes

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Restaurants in the labor shortage areas—including Washington—were ordered yesterday by the War Manpower Commission to cut out all the decorative frills and culinary flourishes connected with their business and to make guests pour their own drinking water.

No more finger bowls, cigarette girls, doormen, cloth tablecloths or napkins, separate vegetable dishes, service plates and "other refinements," WMC said.

If restaurants do not follow these instructions and take all the extra words off their menus, they will be given no labor-recruiting assistance from the U. S. Employment Service, either to find new workers or hold those they have, it was declared.

Both table d'hote and a la carte menus must be made strictly utilitarian, with choices reduced to a minimum, WMC ordered. "Before" and "after" menus must be presented to prove the case of a restaurant which expects to have a claim on USES recruiting services.

Night clubs and "luxury restaurants" run in connection with amusement places will have to get along on their own, as will any restaurant employing attendants who give personal service.

At the same time the Office of War Information was giving a boost to the idea warworkers need good meals to aid them in increasing their war production output. Interest in providing nutritionally sound eating is increasing throughout the country, OWI said, with more than 40 per cent of all labor-

Raid on Ploesti Oil Fields Called Blow Directly at Heart of Axis

By E. F. Vander Veen
Post Staff Writer

Germany and Italy suffered vital injury Sunday in the surprise raid which pilots of the U. S. Ninth Bomber Air Force inflicted in the Ploesti oil fields of Rumania—injury which undoubtedly will affect the entire course of the war.

That is the opinion of Air Force staff officers in Washington who blueprinted the raid and mapped out every move for the nearly 200 Liberator bomber pilots who executed successfully "the biggest low level mass raid in history."

The specially trained American pilots left African ports at a scheduled time and, according to War Department plans, flew directly northwest toward Italy, thus giving the impression that the bombers were headed for a routine raid on either Italy or Sicily. Having passed Crete and the tip of Greece, the bombers swung sharply to the northeast over Greece and the lower part of Yugoslavia and into Rumania for the "kill."

"It really was a surprise," an officer explained. "Undoubtedly the Axis, if it knew of the movement at all, had no idea we would take the chance of flying the long 1200-mile distance over hostile territory, and thus left our fliers alone."

Little interference is believed to have been encountered on the trip to Ploesti, 35 miles north of Bucharsest, the Rumanian capital, and despite heavy opposition over the target and on the return trip, the American pilots, according to the Associated Press, said they won through to score hits on the Steaua Romano refinery, destroying vital parts, on the Colombia Aquiea, one of Rumania's Big Four,

'Breathing Spell' Over, Italy Warned

War Sidelights

Von Papen Protests To Turkey

London, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Algiers radio, quoting a dispatch from Istanbul, said today that German Ambassador Franz von Papen protested to the Turkish Government that Hitler was displeased over the latitude allowed Axis adherents in contacting representatives of the Allies.

This was said to have referred particularly to Hungary and the recent visit to Ankara of Christoph von Kallay, son of the Hungarian premier. It was not clear here just what "contacting" was done.

Home Front Help

Hamilton, Mass., Aug. 2 (AP).—Sacrifices being made on the home front have helped American troops in the Sicilian campaign, according to no less authority than Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., leader of American forces in Sicily.

"The rationing at home is certainly insuring that the soldiers get plenty of butter at all meals, coffee three times a day and eggs for breakfast," the general said in a letter to Mrs. Patton at her Hamilton home.

"Within the last few months," he added, "there has been the greatest improvement in the soldiers. In fact, I may say that they are now veterans in the true sense of the word."

Mainland Attack Coming Soon, Says Allied Broadcast

London, Aug. 2.—The Allies warned Italians today that their "breathing spell" was over and that the Allied onslaught on their mainland was imminent.

The Algiers radio told Italians that Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio had temporized too long, that land forces soon would invade their peninsula itself and that "you will inevitably suffer all the horrors of war—a war on the Italian mainland."

[The International News Service said Prime Minister Churchill convened his war cabinet in special session tonight to weigh the latest reports regarding the Italian crisis. The meeting of the inner British cabinet followed a lengthy session earlier today by the chiefs of the armed services.—Editor's note.]

The demand for unconditional surrender and for the ouster of the Germans was reaffirmed.

"We insist on the unconditional surrender of these evil forces," the broadcast said. "You have been betrayed by Mussolini. Now Pietro Badoglio is betraying you."

A heavy attack by Flying Fortresses upon Naples, fleet actions against three coastal points, the swift pace of the Sicilian offensive and the American capture of San Stefano all combined to show the overwhelming power of the Allies.

Radio Algiers, following up Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's warning of Saturday, told the Italians:

"Mussolini's ouster is not enough. Badoglio goes on with the war."

"Eight days have passed and still the Badoglio government temporizes," said the broadcast, London reception of which was affected by jamming, presumably from some major Axis station.

"If you do not make your voices heard—if Badoglio does not obey your will—we shall bombard your ports and your industries by day and night.

"Our land forces will soon begin an offensive on the Italian mainland.

"We shall push on inexorably through Italy. You will inevitably suffer all the horrors of war—a war on the Italian peninsula."

Talk of an impending "peace march" on Rome by Italian leftists was current in Italian quarters of neutral Madrid.

The one main condition for any Italian withdrawal from the war must be that she provide the Allies with bases from which to get at Germany. Another is that Mussolini and other Fascist leaders must be handed over.

Italian Peace Hopes Fall

Dispatches from Germany and Italy received in Bern said that Italian hopes of peace had diminished sharply.

Nazi troops were said in both Bern and Madrid to be girding for an attempt to hold northern Italy, regardless of whether the Rome government yields.

Eighteen German divisions (from 180,000 to 270,000 men) were reported at Madrid to be in northern Italy, with the Appenines 200 miles above Rome as their potential first line of defense and the fortified Po River line, from 80 to 100 miles farther north, for the ultimate stand.

Italian anti-Fascist parties in a reply to the messages of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill have assured the Allied leaders that they have the "active collaboration of all classes of the Italian people of all ages and all ranks."

Their reply became known in Bern tonight through a printed manifesto that had been widely distributed in Italy before the fall of fascism.

The manifesto spoke of the difficulties of erecting barricades of revolution in an age when the masses of people are helpless before machine guns, cannon, tanks and planes.

Do Not Consider Allies Invaders

It declared, however, that "even those in the horror of burned-out cities do not consider you invaders, but companions in humane work."

It added:

"We await with all our forces. For Italians there is no more freedom than Norway, the Netherlands and France. Thousands of our brothers languish in prisons. In Rome alone there are 3000—most of them intellectuals."

The Naples raid was made by great formations of Flying Fortresses, which blasted the port area and the Capodichino airfield Sunday.

Both of the prime targets were "well covered by bomb bursts," headquarters announced in North Africa.

Five-hundred-pound bombs smashed upon two troop transports in the harbor, exploded a gas works and ravaged the railway station that was "almost completely destroyed" it was announced.

Part of the fleet of Fortresses veered off to punish Capodichino airdrome, tearing great new craters in the field and wrecking already damaged hangars and administration buildings. The bombs destroyed "a large number" of parked aircraft, and flames and burning oil from an oil dump consumed a group of big transport planes.

Fifteen to 20 Axis fighters rose in battle, but the Fortresses and their escort of Lightnings knocked down eight defenders. Headquarters said one Allied plane was lost in all operations Sunday that included many forays over Sicily. It was not disclosed whether the one aircraft was downed in the Naples attack.

(The Italians claimed five Allied planes downed, and said there was "considerable damage" at Naples, with 10 persons killed and 63 injured.)

It was the 150th raid of the war for this squadron of Fortresses. They made their first mission against Rouen, France, a year ago.

Allies Open Big Push on Sicily

cans arrived, but left behind thick minefields and demolitions that slowed the pace of advance.

Axis Admits Gains

Axis broadcasts declared the British in furious assaults had won important new positions near that eastern anchor of the Etna line.

The Axis also reported units of Seventh Army veering southward to support the concerted British drive on Catania.

The fall of San Stefano forced the Axis to retreat along the vulnerable coastal road, probably to take up positions less well prepared. It put a key road system in American hands.

The Canadians broke up wave after wave of German counterattacks and slashed into the Axis defenses after advancing over ground littered with enemy dead.

Elite German troops at some points yielded ground by inches, and then only after a majority of them were lying dead or wounded.

Big Guns Duel

In a series of thunderous duels, Allied big guns silenced some Axis gun batteries, but infantry was nevertheless forced to break through a curtain of fire to assault positions higher up. Tanks and heavy armor are virtually useless in this terrain. It is mainly the footslogger's job.

Besides the heavy Fortress smash Sunday at docks in Naples and the nearby airfield of Capodichino, where eight Axis planes were destroyed, Allied planes bombed the Sicilian ports of Messina and Milazzo to the west, both used to bring in Axis reinforcements.

The Axis communications and supply centers of Adrano, Randazzo and Paterno behind the yielding arc of the Etna line likewise were heavily pounded, and eight trucks were destroyed in a convoy near Orlando.

Eighth Army Rolling

Five Axis planes were downed over Sicily. One Allied plane was lost in all operations over Sicily and Italy.

A Rome broadcast said Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army was "methodically approaching" the main defenses of Catania, and disclosure today of a message to his troops July 30 indicated his force was on the move after massing strength and cautiously exploring German defenses.

Montgomery asserted that "together with our American Allies, we knocked Mussolini off his perch. We will now drive the Germans from Sicily. Into battle with stout heart! Good luck to you all."

He commended his troops' fine performance and congratulated the Americans for the way they "captured and cleaned up more than half the island in record time."

Dispatches said the doughty Canadians forging ahead in the central sector were involved in serious street fighting as they burst into several unnamed places.

Most of the 10,000 new prisoners were captured in the Mistretta area, 6 miles south of San Stefano.

Units of the Goums, the famous French Moroccan troops, fighting in the same sector under American command, scored notable successes in storming position in the high ground.

Spellman Hopes Italy Will Give Up

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 2.—Archbishop Francis J. Spellman said today he hoped Italy would accept peace offers made her, to "provide an opportunity and a challenge to the United Nations to show how they intend to keep faith with the world, with their words and with themselves."

Back from a six-month tour covering Africa, the Mediterranean and the British Isles, and including a visit to the Vatican, Archbishop Spellman read a statement to a general press conference, in which he said:

"Italy's surrender would bring nearer peace for which the world yearns.

"It would spare the lives of American, British and Canadian soldiers, as well as Italian lives and Italian cities. It would spare the lives of many soldiers and civilians of all nations."

Archbishop Spellman, who said he made his 45,000-mile tour by air "at times as a private American citizen and as military vicar of the Catholics in the armed forces of the United States," said his mission was "the mission of America—to make America always stand for good."

He said his visit to Pope Pius XII "was for me the happiest and saddest experience of my journey." He was happy "to receive the blessing of the Holy Father," the archbishop said, and to witness "his sanctity of life and his high purposes," but he added that he was saddened "in the vision of the weight of the cross he carries."

Hull Scoffs At Criticism of Policy on Italy

By the Associated Press

Secretary of State Hull, asked about reports of apprehension in England over American policy toward Italy and the Badoglio government, suggested yesterday that it would be better to give attention instead to the actual fighting.

The main purport of what he has been hearing from United Nations quarters, he told his press conference, is that the military should be given a chance to fight the war without being hamstrung by other considerations.

Hull previously has indicated that he relied on the judgment of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in the Italian situation and President Roosevelt said Friday that when surrender time comes he does not care with whom we deal, so long as he is not a member of the Fascist Party. Asked whether he so regarded Premier Badoglio, the President said he was not going to discuss personalities.

Badoglio, who fought Benito Mussolini's Ethiopian war, and the royal house of Savoy now constitute the Italian government.

What prompted the press conference question yesterday was a reported desire among Englishmen for assurance that an Italian ruling class must not emerge of the type which Lord Vansittart, former chief diplomatic adviser to the British Foreign Office, described in a week-end broadcast thusly:

"Sort of a backstop, half-repentant, semibenevolent totalitarianism a leopard that has changed its spots and manicured its claws in a beauty parlor."

Capital. Approval of the allotment may be the forerunner of another War Hospitality Committee suggestion for quarters for junior officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps who have as much trouble locating such temporary facilities as do their enlisted compatriots, Snyder said.

"We are considering several mansions, not now in use, in the neighborhood of Dupont Circle for these young officers," he told The Post. "The War Hospitality Committee survey found that officers are no better off than buck privates when they arrive in town on temporary assignments and have neither time nor money to devote to finding comfortable quarters. If funds are allotted, the officers would be charged for rooms and food. No charges will be made at the Union Station project, however."

U. S., Britain Warned Stalin Nazis Planned Attack

brought news which was to darken the horizon.

On the night of May 8 Andrei Vyshinsky, the man who prosecuted the 1938 purge trials and who was now first vice commissar for foreign affairs, called Gavrilovich to the Narkomindiel, or foreign commissariat. He almost wept, he hated to say it, but the Soviet government must sever diplomatic relations with Yugoslavia, the state with which it had signed one month before a pact of friendship. Every consideration would be shown the Yugoslav diplomats, he said, and they could remain in Russia in a private capacity, if they so desired, but formal relations must be broken. Tight-lipped, Gavrilovich left the Narkomindiel and that night he spoke to no one.

The next morning Ivar Lunde, secretary of the Norwegian Legation opened an envelope of the kind that usually brought ordinary bills for rent from Burobin, the office for services to foreigners, and found in it a brief note, saying that the Soviet government, in view of the fact that Norway no longer existed as a sovereign state, was ceasing relations.

I learned of it from Lunde and called both the Belgian and Yugoslav Legations, since they were in the same position, to see if they had received similar notes. The Belgian Minister said he had not, and then telephoned back a few minutes later to say yes, he had just found his note on his desk. The Yugoslav secretary, Miletitch, knew nothing about it. But a few hours later Gavrilovich called in his staff and said, "Gentlemen, we are leaving Moscow." It was interesting to note both that Russia showed Yugoslavia the tender attention of not severing relations by note, but only verbally, in contrast to Norway and Belgium; and also that Gavrilovich made no protest over the action. His point of view, which was supported by future facts, was that, as long as Russia could remain out of the war, if it meant a temporary setback to his own country, and as long as Russia could continue to grow strong, all was well for the Allies.

Voluntary Appeasement

Another interesting point was that this action was taken without prompting by Germany. When I called the German and Italian embassies to obtain their reaction, assuming that they were aware of the development, and indeed had brought it about, neither of them knew about it, were astonished to hear of it. It was voluntary appeasement.

Gavrilovich and his staff left by train the morning of June 3 for Ankara. The Belgian legation left that afternoon by trans-Siberian express for the United States. And when the Greek Minister, Diamantopoulas, returned to his legation from seeing off the Belgians, he, too, found a little note, for German occupation of his country was now complete.

"You know what this means," the Greek Minister told me; "peace in the East." And Moscow's diplomatic corps was convinced that the Soviet course was set firmly once more in the path of appeasement. A project as gigantic as invasion of Russia cannot be kept secret, and the German troop movements alone were enough to show what was coming, but while rumors flew elsewhere all over the world of the coming battle, the Russians would not believe it, and the diplomats could not believe it.

Stalin, in this period, took over from Molotov the post of chairman of the council of people's commissars, or prime minister. What was the emergency which finally brought him out of the obscurity of the party chambers to the open council room of the government? The consensus of diplomats was that this was not a "cabinet de guerre," but a cabinet of "pacte a quatre," meaning with Germany, Italy and Japan.

Vacation Duty

The attitude of the Russians themselves to the Soviet-German crisis was reflected in a story then making the rounds of a conversation between Stalin and Hitler. Stalin: "What are all your troops doing on the Soviet border?" Hitler: "They're here on vacation. What are all your troops doing here?" Stalin: "They're here to see that yours stay on vacation."

That story may not have been very far from the truth.

Tass, the Soviet official news agency, said the movements of Soviet and German troops toward their common frontier were not of a "hostile character." The Red army, it insisted, was simply bent upon ordinary summer maneuvers. Reports of friction were said to have been "spread with the intention of provoking Soviet-German hostilities and spreading the war." This phrase was a throwback to the days of March, 1939, when Stalin had first prescribed to his party friendship with Germany, warned against the "Anglo-French warmongers," and ruled that Russia should not "pull their chestnuts out of the fire."

"Both countries intend to observe the provisions of the Soviet-German pact of friendship," Tass concluded, speaking with a falsely authoritive air of knowledge about the intentions of Germany.

Great Britain and the United States warned the Soviet government of information in their possession, that Germany was preparing to attack, and that very warning brought forth another demonstration of Soviet desire for peace. The British Ambassador, Sir Stafford Cripps, asked for an interview with Stalin, to communicate this information to him. It was declined. He asked for an interview with Molotov. It was declined.

He finally succeeded in seeing Vyshinsky, and although that interview has never been published, the general impression was that Vyshinsky went as far as to indicate he considered Sir Stafford a "provocateur," for implying that Germany would turn against her Soviet friends. Sir Stafford left early in June, apparently a beaten man. It was made known that he was going to Stockholm, "to have his teeth fixed." Actually, he went to London on business, and he expected never to return to Moscow. It remained for the Germans to make his mission in Russia a success, and to make Great Britain and the Soviet Union allies.

D. C. Captain Led Bitter Sicily Battle

Gordon's Company Twice Driven From Hill Before Victory

By Don Whitehead
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the United States Seventh Army in Sicily, July 30 (Delayed).—The battle for Hill 937, where Company G fought one of the bitterest fights of this campaign with the Germans, started July 25. It didn't end until midnight 24 hours later, when Capt. William T. Gordon, 1510 Forty-fourth Street Northwest, Washington, D. C., and his company finally routed the enemy after being driven back twice themselves.

GORDON

Late in the afternoon of July 25 Gordon led his men toward Hill 937, which is not far from Nicosia. They drove many Germans out of the woods and then fought their way to the top, but the Germans were strongly intrenched on the reverse slope.

"If you stuck your head over the top of that ridge you were gone," Gordon said. "They counterattacked the next day and shoved us off. We fought our way up again, but they drove us off a second time."

Gordon reformed his men and led them up the hill once more in a frontal assault while Company E, led by Capt. Maurice Belisle, a graduate of Rhode Island University, executed a flanking move.

"Then they laid into us," Gordon said. "Snipers were in the cup on top of the hill above us with machine guns, rifles and grenades. They let us advance part way up the hill and then opened up. Our forward elements were not more than 20 yards apart throwing hand grenades at each other.

"We finally got up into a draw and worked around on both sides while they were firing at us with mortars. At times we could hear them talking and I know they could hear us, we were so close.

"That went on all day but at 10 o'clock that night we dug in on our side of the hill and I knew we were not going to be knocked off again. We consolidated after dark and drove on across the top of the ridge. Our casualties were pretty heavy and from the German bodies lying around I know we inflicted heavy casualties on them."

A little town lies below Sperlina, and there the Germans entrenched after they were driven off Hill 937.

The Germans fought bravely in that valley. That is why there was so many dead Germans in the culverts and ditches when American troops marched by after light tanks had gone in to clear up that pocket of opposition.

Capt. Gordon Member Of Old Army Family

Capt. William T. Gordon, 26-year-old Washingtonian was born into the Army. His father is Col. William W. Gordon, now at Fort Benning, Ga., who once commanded the Third Cavalry at Fort Myer and formerly instructed at the Army War College here. His grandfather was Col. Philip Gordon, West Point instructor, and others of his family served in the cavalry.

Gordon, whose wife, Betty Brown Gordon, resides here, attended Western High School, New Mexico Military Academy and the United States Military Academy. Formerly credit manager for Sears Roebuck in Baltimore, he went overseas with the First Division in June, 1942, and has seen action at Oran, among other North African hot-spots.

His father-in-law is Brig. Gen. Philip E. Brown, stationed here.

New Drug Scarce

U. S. Delays Penicillin's Civilian Use

By Frank Carey
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Office of Scientific Research and Development said today that there have been "many demands" for penicillin, the new antibacterial drug obtained from mold, but that present supplies are so limited that many civilian requests "will inevitably have to be refused."

Declaring that the limitation of supply is the result of "extraordinary difficulty in large-scale production," Dr. A. N. Richards, chairman of the committee on medical research of OSRD, said in a statement that efforts to increase production were being made with Government backing.

Drug Needed in War

"The primary interest of the Government in penicillin is related to war casualties of the armed forces," he said.

He said a large share of the present restricted supplies was going to Army and Navy hospitals, and that a "significant fraction" also had been allocated to selected civilian hospitals for studies designed to obtain information "to help toward its most effective utilization" by Army and Navy Medical Corps.

All penicillin now being produced, he said, must be reported to the War Production Board for allocation, and he added:

Supply Allocated

"Allocations are made to Army, Navy, United States Public Health Service and the Office of Scientific Research and Development after discussion of the needs of each, and adjustment of available supply to those needs.

"No one, other than the Government agencies named, may purchase penicillin; no patient who receives it may pay for it."

Dr. Richards said "prodigious efforts to improve and increase production are being made by 16 manufacturing concerns with the backing of the Federal Government," and that "the prospect of considerable alleviation of the present scarcity by the end of this year is good."

Bowles Begins Decentralizing Of OPA Power

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

The post of executive assistant for field operations was created by OPA General Manager Chester Bowles yesterday in what was officially described "as the first step in a broad program of decentralization."

Named to the post was Frank E. Marsh of San Francisco, OPA regional administrator for California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, and Arizona, who formerly was in the real estate mortgage and investment business.

Bowles said Marsh's appointment was "temporary," although indications were that the appointee may stay on if adequate arrangements are made to fill his post in San Francisco. Marsh will work out of Washington, starting Thursday.

"Hard Job" Recognized

The importance of the new position was indicated in the assertion by Bowles that :"Effective price control and rationing depend on local war price and rationing boards, staffed by thousands of loyal volunteer workers.

"I do not believe we can overemphasize the importance of their part in the program. Theirs is a hard job and we are going to do everything possible to make their task easier by giving them the help and authority they need."

Declaring that Marsh has been authorized to act for the general manager, Bowles added, "The field organization will have a strong voice in OPA politics and direct connection at all times to my office."

Result of Conferences

Bowles' action, the first announced to the public since he took office a week ago, followed several days of conferences here last week with regional administrators. At the conferences, Bowles was said to have made it clear that he was determined to make OPA work and also to refute by positive action the assertions that the agency was beyond repair.

Probably the greatest problem now confronting Bowles is how to keep OPA alive in the face of extreme difficulty in obtaining business-trained men as replacements for the so-called professors and economists whom Congress wants out of OPA by August 16.

Ploesti Raid Dealt Axis Vital Blow

and on the Americana Romana, declared to have suffered the heaviest damage with hits scored on distillation and cracking plants.

To prove this, news from Cairo reported that pilots returning from the 2400-mile round trip borught back photographic evidence of the heavy damage to Europe's largest group of oil refineries which supply the Axis with one-third of its oil requirements.

Against 51 Messerschmitt 109's and 110's and Focke-Wulf 190's shot down, the Middle East Command announced that 20 Liberators were brought down over the target area and an undisclosed number of others failed to return.

In discussing the vital injury suffered by the Axis, air staff officers emphasized that the Ploesti field was the main source of fuel supply for Nazi planes used on the Russian front.

"While it is true that Germany has distilling plants in Germany sufficient to refine about twice the amount of oil in the Ploesti field," one officer explained, "it has now become a matter of difficult transportation, and that fact not only should slow up the Axis nearly 100 per cent, but disrupt their entire schedule."

He pointed out that of the seven plants bombed, two—one at Campini, northwest of Ploesti, and the other at Brazi, just south of the city—alone manufactured high octane gas badly needed by the Axis. Thus, all of the fuel now taken from the field must be shipped to Germany.

Transportation outlets are not of the best from the Ploesti area, although pipe lines do run directly south from the field into centers where better transportation facilities are offered.

Notwithstanding this, the officer explained, the Axis must now transport this oil to Germany, hundreds of miles farther away from Russia, refine it, and then ship it the long way back through Rumania and, if lucky, into Russia.

That, it was pointed out, is really a job. Not only is the time element terrific, but the task is one of danger and unlikely to succeed. Much of the oil will of necessity be barged down the Danube River, a ready target for Allied planes, and it is unlikely, those in Washington believe, that a great percentage of oil will reach Germany, and, if it does, that much of the refined fuel will find its way back over the treacherous route.

Troops Train Under Fire in West Virginia

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

A combat team of Army troops yesterday began specialized maneuvers in mountain warfare in the new Monongahela Forest training area near Elkins, W. Va., the War Department announced.

High on the curriculum will be rock climbing and battle practice under the fire of live ammunition. Generally, the battle exercises will be designed to give practice in movement of troops and material over the rocky terrain in the Elkins area.

Maneuver headquarters are in Elkins.

The War Department said that the maneuvers will continue indefinitely, with one combat team at a time taking over the area.

The maneuvers, first to be held in West Virginia during the war, are under direction of the Thirteenth Army Corps.

Most of the maneuver area is in the Monongahela National Forest, extending across parts of nine counties, including Preston, Tucker, Grant, Randolph, Pendleton, Webster, Pocahontas, Nicholas and Greenbriar.

The battle practice with live ammunition will be confined to the Government-owned parts of the maneuver area, according to the War Department.

The special mountain training was regarded as part of the ground force's program for emphasizing all-around varieties of battle experience before sending troops into action.

Presumably the troops now entering maneuvers would be too late for action in cleaning out the mountainous northeastern corner of Sicily, but not too late to aid in a United Nations blow at some other mountainous part of Europe, like the Balkans.

Worry Makes Men Ill

Steinbeck Declares Letters Vital to Soldiers' Morale

By John Steinbeck

Somewhere in England.—To the G. I.'s in the field or in barracks or on maneuvers, letters are nearly the most important things that happen or don't happen. In five minutes of talk with a soldier you know whether he has heard from home or that letters do not come. It is a constant source of conversation, of worry and of gladness.

A group of men sit down together and they do not know one another, but in a very short time the wallets come out and pictures are passed about, pictures of wives and children. This is taken as a matter of course. No one is bored with it. And if a letter has been received, even a dull letter, it is usually read aloud and every one is interested. And if the letters are worry letters the man shows it in his face and the Army doctors say that often he gets sick and doesn't even know what cuased it.

From Whining Wife

The private letters are from his wife. She was a whiner. Probably always has been. She was living with his parents. Things were not going well. They were spoiling the baby and the baby had been sick. She wished she could move away but there wasn' enough money. She hadn' been feeling very well herself. Nothing you could put your finger on, but she was just run down. But she wasn't happy and she wanted the war to be over so he could go home and she could have the things she was used to.

He finished reading the letter and his face was filled with worry. "She's very delicate," he said. He pulled out the inevitable wallet and showed a picture of her. A spoiled, pout-mouthed little blond, who was probably strong enough to lick two men, a complete whiner. "I wish she could go to California," he said. "I wish I could send her." He turned the letter over and there was a postscript: "I don't know how long I can keep this up," the postscript said. "I have to think a little bit for myself and after all I'm not getting any younger."

Threatened by Letter

There was the threat, the thing that was putting worry in his face. She was threatening him and he knew it, and yet he was holding on to this thing and arguing with himself. He was putting in tremendous days of work and at night he had to go to bed with the picture of his wife going off with another man. She had the knife in him and she knew it. And he would get no rest and after a while his stomach would go to pieces and he would be hopitalized.

Another had not heard at all, tle book and in it were columns of dates and check marks, a year of them, a check mark for every day in the year. Every day a letter was written. It amazed him. Sometimes they were weeks arriving and he checked them against the postmarks. He had six of them in his pocket. They weren't terribly interesting letters, but one was written every day and, although he was late in knowing, he knew what had happened every day and there was no worry in him. He wanted desperately to go home, but he felt that he had not been cut off.

Soldier Without Mail

Another had not heard at all, no letters, no word at all. And he used all sorts of little explanations to himself. The ship that had the letters on board had been sunk. Maybe there was some one with his name who was getting his letters. Maybe the censor had taken them. He used all of these on himself. Maybe she was sick, maybe she was even dead, but what he was saying all the time to himself was that almost surely she wasn't writing.

This is a great time for wives. They will never in their lives be so beautiful as they are now. Their eyes will never be so bright, nor every kindness and every gentleness remembered the way it is now. They have great power now, and so many of them misuse it. So many use it to hurt and to worry. And a man in the Army hasn't time for these things in the daytime. Only when he should be sleeping can he consider the overtones of letters or think up possible reasons why there are no letters.

Man Has Trapped Feeling

And a man feels trapped. If something is wrong, there is nothing in the world that he can do about it. He cannot go to a sick wife, nor can he revenge himself on a creeper. He is here and helpless and one good letter can make the difference between a good soldier and a sick man.

A large number of the men have only one revenge for bad treatment of this kind. When it finally gets through to them that they are being ignored and forgotten, they go out for other women. Their self-respect demands it. They are a curiously faithful crowd. For all the talk about what soldiers do they want terribly to be related to one woman. They build a sort of image of perfection that couldn't possibiy have been true, and they hold on to it as long as they can, and they will only abandon it when they have to.

Good food can be given to a man, and entertainment and hard work, but nothing in the world can take the place of the letters. They are the single strings and when they are cut the morale of that man is shattered.

Groves to Quit Managership Of D.C. Airport

National Airport's Johnny Groves, the man behind the machinery of one of the country's biggest and busiest fields, will vacate his post as manager within a month to become operations division manager for the Air Transport Association of America.

GROVES

The Post learned yesterday that the former Maryland University quarterback will close a 17-year-old career with the Government's air services in favor of a post which he considers a "challenge." He will replace Fowler Barker, who has accepted a position with McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. as editor of an aviation publication.

Groves' successor has not been appointed airport officials stated.

The advancement and coordination of all air line services will be Groves' newest job, and he is looking forward to solving some of the wartime operating problems of airway traffic control.

On the other hand, he added yesterday, "I'll never have another job I like as much as this one. I've received swell support."

Groves, who has spent the major part of his life in Washington, interspersed service with the U. S. Marine Corps between graduation from the University of Maryland and joining the old Aeronautics Bureau of the Department of Commerce in 1926.

In the CAA, he served in many capacities, and he held positions in the pilot training program, the airport section and the flight information section. He received his pilot's license in 1929.

Said Morgenthau: "Taxes are the best method of paying for the war—because they pay for the war once and for all."

Plainly pessimistic on the outlook for new taxes, Doughton told newsmen: "I can't see anything ahead but trouble and a battle all the way.

"My one hope is that we can write a bill for revenue and not for votes. That's a problem we have to face in writing a bill before an election year. Some people may want to play politics with it."

Doughton declined comment on Sunday's statement by Senate Finance Committee Chairman Walter F. George that further drastic increases in individual income tax rates may destroy the Nation's middle class, or on George's forecast that Congress will levy only five or six billion dollars in new taxes. (George estimated $1,500,000,000 more can be raised from corporations, $1,500,000,000 from excise taxes, and about three billion dollars from individuals.)

Disney in Agreement

But Representative Wesley E. Disney of Oklahoma, a ranking Democratic member of the Ways and Means Committee, voiced hearty agreement with George that another sharp upward increase in income taxes might wipe out the Nation's little man. Both the George and Disney statements followed reports that the Treasury will bear heavily on income taxes in the new program.

Doughton said he wanted to see the Treasury and Joint Committee recommendations "and take a look at the patient" before discussing tax methods: "You can't perform an operation without looking at the patient and seeing where to cut."

"Incidentally," said Doughton, "I haven't heard any talk of anyone submitting estimates for cutting expenses. It seems to me that is just as necessary as submitting estimates for more taxes."

In releasing the tax charts, Morgenthau said 95 cents of every dollar the Government spends goes for the war effort—that $36,800,000,000 of this fiscal year's estimated $38,700,000,000 in revenue "will go toward the purchase of guns, tanks, ships, and planes in order that decency may be restored to the world."

One chart compared income taxes paid by two classes of taxpayers in Britain, Canada and the United States, as follows:

	$2000 net income	$5000 net income
United States	$188	$932
Canada	$231	$1378
United Kingdom	$378	$1628

Another chart demonstrated that the 35.9 per cent of total Government costs met by taxes in this country compared with 51.7 per cent in Britain and 47.1 per cent in Canada.

In a third chart Government receipts were compared with spending during fiscal years 1942, 1943 and 1944. The comparison showed 17 per cent of Federal spending was for nonwar purposes in 1942, that in the last fiscal year only 6 per cent went for nonwar uses, and in the present fiscal year this will drop to 5 per cent. This chart noted that "receipts are increasing but so is national income."

Father-Draft Order Issued

The action marks the passing of Class 3-A as a dependency classification. The class will be retained for bookkeeping purposes, but those now in it will be gradually withdrawn, either into 1-A for immediate induction, 4-F because of physical disability, 2-A, 2-B, or 2-C because of occupational reasons, or 3-D where "extreme hardship and privation" may be caused.

Selective Service boards were directed to begin reclassifying fathers out of 3-A immediately in preparation for meeting October calls, but under no circumstances to induct any fathers in this group before the October 1 date.

Fathers will be called according to their Selective Service order number without regard to the number of children an individual parent has.

Children May Be Factor

The number of children may become a factor in individual cases where draft boards consider possible classification into 3D—for hardship reasons. The boards are to take into consideration the allotments provided servicemen as follows: Wife, $50 a month; wife and one child, $62 monthly, and an additional $10 for each additional child.

McNutt said the Army, Navy and War Manpower Commission planned to press for congressional action to increase the allotments when Congress reconvenes September 15.

Observers believe that it is also possible that Congress, which has been cool toward the father's draft question, might legislate before October 1 outlawing the action. WMC officials were confident that such action would face an almost certain presidential veto.

In making up its quotas each month, individual draft boards will first induct all available volunteers, then call up single men, men with collateral dependents and men with wives only before calling up men with pre-Pearl Harbor children. Men with children are to be used only to fill up shortages in the monthly quotas.

May Speed Job Shifts

Induction of fathers with children born after September 15, 1942 has been taking place for some time. Only other fathers who have been drafted are the few who left essential agricultural activities without permission and those engaged in designated nondeferable occupations.

It is believed that the start of the father draft will be used as a means of intensifying the War Manpower Commission drive to persuade workers to change to essential jobs wherever possible. McNutt stated that occupation, rather than dependency, should have been the main reason for deferment all along.

management committees now running nutrition programs.

Health Clubs Started

Many plants not only have made it possible for their workers to get good meals while on the job, but have started "health for victory" clubs that spread the information into the workers' homes.

Some of them have put expert nutritionists to work planning simple vitamin-filled menus geared to rationing and distribute thousands of bulletins containing these and other health aids.

Other food news yesterday included:

1. Announcement by Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones that the country's meat subsidy program cost $25,000,329.60 in June and the butter subsidy $9,013,829.98. This expenditure in RFC funds covered the subsidy on 2,017,399,104 pounds of meat and 180,276,600 pounds of butter.

At this rate the subsidy on these two items alone will cost 408 million dollars for a year. The RFC had 450 million dollars it could expend on the subsidy, it was declared when the program went into effect and three items were expected to be selected.

2. The war Food Administration announced support prices for the 1943 crop of raisins and prunes and said the Government would purchase the entire output. The new price supports reflect an increase of roughly $45 per ton over the prices of 1942.

This increased cost will not be reflected in any raisins or prunes released for civilian consumption, it was declared. Under a Commodity Credit Corporation purchase program, WFA said, quantities not needed for military and lend-lease purposes will be resold in normal trade channels at prices equivalent to last year's levels.

August—the Traditional Month to Begin Choosing Your FURNITURE - FLOORCOVERINGS . .

to make your fall-winter home more gracious, attractive and livable . . .

Why is August a good month to shop for furniture and floorcoverings

It is a month established by tradition . . . to refurnish and redecorate . . . to add zest and "life" and comfort to your home . . . to create the background for home enjoyment through the long fall-winter season. Aside from tradition, August is sufficiently in advance of the fall season so that you may plan your purchases more carefully.

Will there be a "Semi-Annual Savings" Event this year as in the past

No, there will not be. This year market conditions make it impossible to secure merchandise of the quality and style at the customary savings you have been offered in other years. In addition, we are complying with the War Production Board's regulations issued recently concerning special events.

Will I find selections to make my home gracious and livable

Throughout our Fifth and Sixth Floors you find attractive furniture and floorcoverings . . . which will be augmented by new shipments as they arrive from manufacturers. Naturally, this year the variety is somewhat curtailed . . . but, as always, good taste and smartness prevail. From our selections you can fashion innumerable settings . . . many unusual distinctive single pieces are available for added charm. Open-stock selections of bedroom furniture are still possible. We continue to offer an exceedingly large variety of wool broadloom carpets and wool rugs.

While certain limitations and modifications of details of construction have taken place, our standard of quality remains the same . . . assuring you of the best obtainable at the price. Yes, despite conditions as they now exist, we think you can have your fall-winter home as gracious, as attractive and as livable as you would like it to be. And we invite you to Woodward & Lothrop to begin choosing your furniture and floorcoverings this traditional month of August.

Veteran Plan Is Welcomed By Industry

"Industry welcomes the President's postwar program for veterans and asks the opportunity to sit down with the President and appropriate committees of Congress to work out the practical details," Frederick C. Crawford, President of the National Association of Manufacturers, said in New York yesterday.

Mr. Crawford pointed out that President Roosevelt had nominated private industry as the source of postwar jobs, and "private industry unhesitatingly accepts from the President this nomination as job-giver."

The statement follows in part:

We welcome the President's postwar program for the veterans of this war.

Not to Make Jobs

In promising them a mustering-out allowance "to cover a reasonable time," supplemented by unemployment insurance "in case no job is found after diligent search," he made it clear that the Government itself does not expect to make jobs for the returning troops, but does expect that jobs can be found.

He indicated where the jobs should be sought in his further promise that, for purposes of unemployment insurance," all members of the armed forces should be treated as if they had continued their employment in private industry."

Private industry unhesitatingly accepts from the President this nomination as job-giver.

Teamwork Necessary

For some time industry has been planing to provide jobs for returning troops. Many industries have rehabilitation programs in full progress and hundreds of soldiers have been returned to their former jobs. The President has correctly pointed out that the prime postwar necessity is jobs. American industry is ready and willing to carry out its part of the program from where the President left it.

He said the executive branch of Government "cannot do it alone" and that he "hoped the Congress will help." We believe that teamwork among these two government functions and business—the maker of jobs—is necessary to achievement of the postwar ideals. With such teamwork America has nothing to fear in the postwar world.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Bankers' Service Meeting

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—The American Bankers Association has announced it will hold a streamlined, limited-attendance war service meeting here September 13 to 15, replacing its usual annual convention.

The purpose will be to discuss the work of banks in connection with the war and the national and international financial and economic problems of the present and postwar periods.

Member banks were asked to limit delegates to one officer in addition to bank representatives who are officers or committeemen of the Bankers Association.

Specific topics scheduled for discussion include current investments and loans, small banks after the war, war savings, war financing, inter-American fiscal policy and international fiscal policy.

Costs Cut Profits

Lower earnings are in prospect for tobacco companies this year despite record sales valumes, says the United Business Service in a special report on the industry released yesterday. The service points out that while record sales of cigarettes, cigars, chewing tobacco and snuff are taxing the industry's production facilities, rising costs and labor shortages are steadily pinching operating margins.

Made Sales Manager

It has just been announced that Robert F. Willey has been appointed manager of sales of Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Washington office to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of Emeric R. Leonard.

Harlem Riots Take 5 Lives, Last 16 Hours

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 2.—After five Negroes had been killed, 543 persons injured and more than 500 arrested during 16 hours of disorders in Harlem, the Nation's largest Negro neighborhood, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia expressed belief today that "all's quiet now."

But 6000 policemen still were patrolling Harlem streets and subway stations, all liquor stores in the area were closed on orders of the mayor, and motor traffic was at a virtual standstill.

Within minutes after a curfew was clamped down at 10:30 p. m. the sidewalks were clear of virtually all persons except police and volunteers patrolling the debris-strewn streets.

At an hour when ordinarily the taverns are busy, the theaters full and the streets crowded, the residents of the Nation's largest Negro neighborhood disappeared. The area's population is about 300,000.

A force of 6000 police was on duty in the area to keep the peace.

An estimate that Harlem merchants suffered five million dollars in property losses, through looting and damage to their stores, came from Matthew J. Eder, executive secretary of the Uptown Chamber of Commerce.

In one of his many broadcasts to Harlem residents during the disturbance, Mayor LaGuardia said "this was not a race riot."

Mayor Blames Hoodlums

"There was no conflict between groups of our citizens," said the mayor. "What happened was the thoughtless, criminal acts of hoodlums, reckless, irresponsible people. Strange to say, 'there was no concerted action. Groups of hoodlums acted on their own initiative."

The disorders began at 7:30 last night when a policeman shot a Negro soldier who tried to interfere with the arrest of a Negro woman in a hotel lobby. The last outbreak was reported at 11:30 a. m. today when 20 policemen rescued a fellow officer and 5 prisoners from a pawn shop where a crowd of 700 Negroes threatened the officer and threw rocks into the shop.

The prisoners, arrested on charges of stealing articles from the shop, harangued the crowd to "go home and get your guns and get us out of here."

Many Stores Looted

Shop windows were broken in many sections of Harlem, and on the south side of 116th Street at least half the stores had smashed panes. Many stores were looted almost completely.

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine said that 44 policemen were injured in the disorders, and that 99 per cent of the others were Negroes.

A battalion of the New York militia arrived late this morning, headed by Brig. Gen. John J. Mangan, who said he was "just looking around." City officials later announced that a committee of 1500 persons, most of them Negroes, would help patrol Harlem streets tonight. Each man would be equipped with a night stick, officials said.

Magistrate Thomas A. Aurello issued a statement expressing bewilderment at the disorders. He said as far back as he could remember Harlem lived in peace and harmony, Lut—

"Now, of late, on the slightest provocation, large numbers are moved to disorder, as if giving expression to some pent-up feeling. It seems to me some insidious propaganda is misleading otherwise would-be peaceful people."

Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the disturbances resulted from "the false rumor that a policeman had killed a Negro soldier in the presence of his mother."

He declared "It cannot be clearly emphasized that this was not a race riot in any sense of the term," but said "the mistreatment of Negro soldiers, particularly in the South, is a terribly sore point with Negroes (and thus the beginning of the trouble."

Ex-White House Policeman Indicted as Slayer of Wife

Jefferies D. Henry, 35, discharged White House policeman, was indicted yesterday on a charge of first degree murder by the District grand jury in connection with the "beer-booth" fatal shooting of his second wife on April 27.

This was one of 51 indictments returned before Justice James W. Morris of District Court.

The motive for the slaying of Mrs. Lola Jane Henry was jealousy, police said. Henry, who resides at 3473 Holmead Place Northwest, was said to have become estranged from his wife, purchased a revolver in Arlington and then followed his wife to New Orleans and then back to Washington.

Police Story of Killing

He made an appointment to meet Mrs. Henry in a restaurant at 1109 Thirteenth Street Northwest. The couple had one glass of beer, and after a dispute over Mrs. Henry's private life, Henry fired one shot into his wife's heart and then shot himself, police said. The bullet a rib, police said. He is now in was deflected from his heart by District Jail, having recovered from the wound. Henry is the father of five children.

Benjamin Shenker, 30, food market manager now serving a nine-month term for illegally wearing the uniform and medals of an Army officer, was charged with bigamy and perjury. According to the complaint on file with the court, Shenker married in 1935 in Philadelphia and without obtaining a divorce remarried a Washington woman this year.

Mrs. Annie W. Ridgely, 49, Negro, was indicted on a charge of stealing 59 10-cent War Stamps and 55 25-cent War Stamps from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, where she was employed as a counter and examiner of stamps.

Bigamist Again Charged

Mrs. Grace Reinert, 20-year-old convict bigamist with a penchant for marrying sailors, was indicted on a charge of escaping from custody of Federal officers. Mrs. Reinert "walked out" of Gallinger Hospital on February 24, where she was interned pending sentence on the bigamy conviction.

The other indictments follow:

Nonsupport of minor children: Benjamin C. Hendricks.

Two Unofficial Checks Made On 'Dancer'

Leo Crowley, director of the Office of Economic Warfare, yesterday asserted he had not received any official request for a probe of the appointment of John Bovingdon, alleged ballet dancer, to a $5600 a year position as analyst with the OEW.

"But if Representative Dies or any other responsible official makes such a request, I will take it up," the OEW head declared. He said he had requested the Civil Service Commission file on the appointee to further familiarize himself with Bovingdon's background, but stressed that the check was an unofficial one.

Dies, who had threatened to take the matter of the appointment up with Congress, was reported at his office to be in Texas. In the meantime the Civil Service Commission is conducting a further investigation. It was said this is a routine double-check.

Earlier Bovingdon told reporters that he had never been a ballet dancer, but that he had taken up "rhythmic gymnastics" for his health.

Graduating from Harvard in 1915, Bovingdon said he became a professor of economics at Keio University, Tokyo, and from 1920 to 1922 was employed by the American Woolen Co. as an economic analyst.

His health became bad, he said, and he took up gymnastics as a last resort "in a period when I was studying how a man could use his body so he wouldn't decay." He denied that he had ever been active in left wing political movements.

Speaks 5 Languages

Bovingdon said he gave rhythmic gymnastic exhibitions and lectures in Japan, China and Europe until 1941, when he entered Columbia, where he was awarded a Ph.D. degree. He speaks four foreign languages, Japanese, French, German and Russian.

Badgered by calls from newspapers throughout the Nation, Bovingdon finally had all efforts to communicate with him transferred to the office of James Hasselman, public relations officer for the OEW.

To reporters, Hasselman recited notations taken from the Civil Service files which he said substantiated the appointee's claims to recognition as an economist.

Shoreham Gets Its License to Raise Chickens

Tragedies of Shakespeare have given way to inexorable emergency demands of a nation at war, it was disclosed yesterday when the Shoreham Hotel obtained Health Department license to engage in poultry raising in a building to be vacated by King-Smith Studios, purveyors of Shakespearean education to hopeful Thespians.

The license was granted following a comedy of denial and complaints with the smart Shoreham in the principal role of a chickenless hotel Hamlet trying to answer the question of to be or not to be.

4000 to Be Tenants

With Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, assenting, the answer was—yes, it is to be.

When present tenants end their lease in September, the spacious building adjoining the Shoreham, some 4000 chicks now being raised to succulency in the Shoreham's basement will be transferred to chirp their lines where Shakespearean students once spoke the Bard's.

As soon as practicable the chickens will again be transferred, this time to a 150-acre farm, near Rockville, Md. The farm was recently acquired by the hotel to augment fare of its influential and importantly placed guests, among them War Mobilization Director Byrnes and handsome Paul V. McNutt.

How It Came About

The Shoreham was forced into the poultry business as market supplies of vegetables, chickens and milk became increasingly difficult to get.

In obtaining the license the Shoreham complied with District laws prohibiting stock raising within 500 feet of a place of public assembly.

"And nobody need worry that they will be a nuisance," a Shoreham dignitary said. "About the time the chickens get their voices they will be memories of a pleasant dinner."

Here's something really new for dinner—hearty ham salad rolls! They're a snap to fix on a summer night, and so delicious your family will call for them often. So save this recipe for your file of point-thrifty favorites.

You can use leftover cooked ham if you have it—or buy a ¾ lb. piece of cooked, boneless Star Ham. We suggest Armour's Star Ham because it has such fine flavor. It is mellowed in fragrant hickory smoke and is very tender and mild. It will heighten your enjoyment of these salad rolls that will provide an ample meal for a family of 4.

Make the salad by mixing 2 cups cubed, cooked Star Ham, ½ cup diced celery, ¼ cup diced sweet pickle, 2 hard cooked Cloverbloom Eggs sliced, ¼ tsp. salt. Add enough mayonnaise or cooked salad dressing to moisten well. Slit 4 finger rolls lengthwise, to make large enough opening to hold salad. Butter lightly and toast if desired. Fill with ham salad and garnish the top with a slice of hard cooked egg.

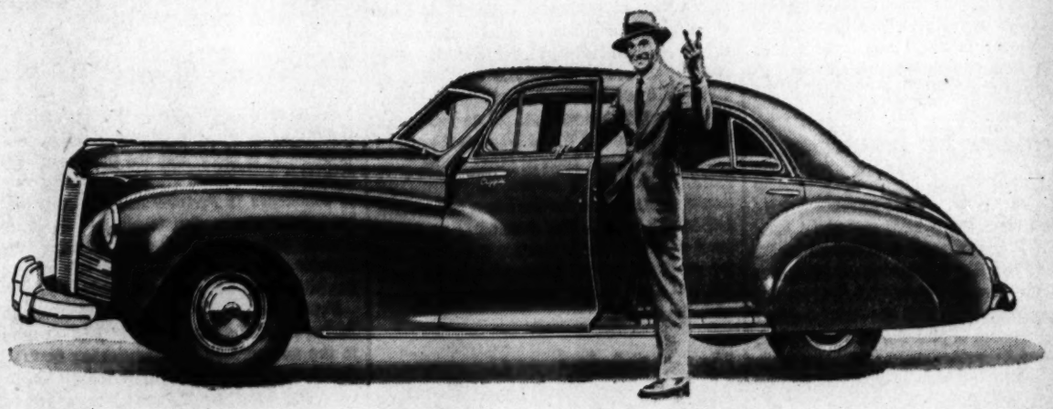
Helpful Hints for Duration Driving



MECHANICS ARE SCARCE these days. That's why we urge you to catch little troubles before they grow up—avoid the need for major repairs.

And here are some helpful hints:

Front-end check—tires are hard to get (none available for "A" book holders). Prevent tire wear by keeping your wheels lined up.

Battery inspection—restricted driving and frequent lay-ups lead to battery failure. Check your battery—get set for wartime driving conditions.

Seat covers—protect your upholstery...increase the future trade-in value of your car.

Ignition adjustment—get top mileage out of every gallon of gas—plus smooth, dependable performance.

Fender protection—no more new fenders are being made. Our special spray process, applied on the under side, prevents fenders from rusting through.

Paint & Chrome preservation—chrome plating is "out" for the duration. Our preservative treatment protects chrome and paint surfaces against deterioration.

A little care saves a lot of wear—so drive in for a "car health" check-up. Save yourself time, trouble and money!

P. S. HAVE YOU "LAID UP" YOUR CAR? If you don't need it, let us buy it for resale to someone who does! Used car prices are up—now is the time to sell.

Up To The A. G.

President Roosevelt's recent disclosure that he requested an opinion from the Attorney General as to the appointment of a people's counsel to the District Public Utilities Commission raises new hope. There had been some fears that the White House might ignore the latest reminder from Congress that this position should be filled. Unless the President was indulging in one of his little jokes, however, his request may well be the first step toward giving the people of the District the aid they are seeking for protection of their interests in the fixing of utility rates.

It is rather curious, of course, to have the President asking the Attorney General whether he should fill a position created by Congress. A White House secretary could readily have found the answer by merely glancing at the act creating the Public Utilities Commission and the people's counsel. If the Attorney General had to render an opinion on the filling of every vacancy in the Federal or District service, he would have time for little else. Nevertheless we hope that such an opinion will soon be forthcoming, for it should help to clarify his unmistakable obligation to make the appointment.

If the Attorney General is forthright in his reply, he will probably say to the President: "What I think as to the desirability of appointing a people's counsel in the District of Columbia is of no significance. The position was created by Congress long before you and I came to Washington. The law directing you to appoint a people's counsel has not been modified or repealed. Congress has now appropriated funds for the salary of such an official, in spite of the fact that you have left the office vacant for a number of years. You have a clear-cut responsibility under the Constitution to make the appointment regardless of whether you or I, or both of us, favor the idea of people's counsels in general."

To this the Attorney General might well add: "Since the filling of this vacancy is mandatory under the law, I am submitting the names of several District lawyers who are well qualified to hold the position." The District Bar Association is preparing to recommend several qualified candidates. In any event, the whole burden of responsibility in this matter appears to have been shifted to the Attorney General and it cannot be lifted until a straightforward opinion has been sent to the White House.

Reminder To Ramirez

The United States has been extremely patient with Argentina, but patience has its limit, and these limits have just about been reached. It is now more than a year and a half since the Rio conference of American foreign ministers at which Argentina agreed to break off relations with the Axis provided she were allowed to pick her own good time. Since then Argentine statesmen have regularly placed their hands on their hearts and eloquently proclaimed their devotion to the principle of hemisphere solidarity. But the envoys of Germany, Italy and Japan have remained at Buenos Aires, and a flood of vital military information, including ship sailings, have poured out from that city to Axis capitals.

When the Castillo government was overthrown, both the people of Argentina and the people of the other American republics assumed that this change of rulers at Buenos Aires would result in a change of policy. And, sure enough, the Argentine government's policy was changed—internally. The new regime proceeded to establish on American soil the nearest thing to the kind of totalitarian regime that exists in Germany and existed in Italy up to July 25. But while it, like its predecessor, promised the speedy fulfillment of its international obligations, including the obligations embodied in the Rio pact, it has done nothing whatsoever about it. There has been one excuse for inaction after another.

Because of this state of affairs, the action of the Office of Economic Warfare in notifying 16,000 American exporters that all licenses for exportation to Argentina which were approved before May 1, 1943 have been revoked has a special significance. In effect this action halts all outgoing trade between the United States and Argentina. To be sure, the ostensible reason for this action is that some of the goods that have been sent to Argentina have fallen into the hands of firms on our blacklist. But it is quite in order to assume that our impatience with Argentina's equivocal foreign policy had something to do with it. Certainly the Ramirez government would be well advised to regard this action as the writing on the wall and act accordingly. It hasn't much time left.

Forced Option

The chairman of the Republican National Committee. Harrison E. Spangler, gives the unhappy impression of a man trying to ride an elephant in two directions at the same time. The attempt, by no means easy even under normal circumstances, is now rendered the more difficult by a persistent pulling and tugging at the elephant's bridle on the part of Republicans who desire to influence its course. Mr. Spangler deplores this. He is fearful that it will split the Republican Party. But his fear merely reveals a total failure to comprehend the real nature of the party's situation. For the patent fact is that the party is already split between groups vaguely, and perhaps ambiguously, labeled "isolationists" and "internationalists." The G. O. P. elephant must pursue the path pointed to by one group or the other. It cannot follow both.

In acknowledging this split and facing it candidly, the unofficial organization known as the Republican Postwar Policy Association is rendering its party a distinct service. For the split, now confined to the bigwigs, will become irreparable if it is extended to the rank and file. As the chairman of the insurgent association, Deneen A. Watson put it, "Unless the party is smoked out now, there will be a split in 1944. We want to start now, and not wait for the bells to toll at the Republican convention."

This is elementary political sense. The American public is not going to follow the Republican Party until it knows where the party is going. The public is vitally concerned with the role which the United States is to assume in international affairs when the war is ended. It is unlikely to be satisfied with a noncommittal straddling of postwar issues—or even with vaguely pious promises to promote international goodwill. Men who fought overseas, and the families of those men at home, are not going to respond to the kind of leadership capable of envisioning the future only in terms of the past. Even their impatience with the errors of the Administration will not bulk them behind a party which has nothing to offer but opposition.

Mr. Watson delivered a simple, sensible observation on this score: "A clear statement of Republican conviction that our party leadership favors continuing, constructive and responsible participation in world affairs will bring strength to the party and sorely needed statesmanship to the affairs of the Nation." That Mr. Spangler resists such a course affords one more indication that he stands for nothing better than the sterile negativism which has sent the Republican Party down to defeat in the past three presidential elections. "I never quarrel with Republicans," he told newspapermen the other day. "I quarrel only with New Dealers." Well, there are Republicans with whom he must quarrel if he is to give his party a positive program which will appeal to the hopes and ideals of American millions.

The Republican Party is faced with what the great American philosopher, William James, termed a "forced option." It must move forward and lead, or else be left behind. It cannot stand still while deliberating on its choice. For the inexorable movement of events will overtake and engulf it, transforming its inertia into retreat. At no time since the close of the last World War has the opportunity of the party been so great. Now, even more than then, a return to "normalcy" would spell disaster for the hopes of America and of the world. The demand of an awakened people today is not for normalcy, but for progress; not for a reversion to the past, but for a fresh and constructive grappling with the future.

Eccentricity

Martin Dies has disclosed—to employ one of his own favorite terms—that an economic analyst in the Office of Economic Warfare was at one time a professional ballet dancer. As to the quality of the culprit's dancing or his competence as an economist, the Texas Congressman says naught. Such judgments, presumably, are beyond the scope of Mr. Dies' concern. As chairman of the august House Committee on Un-American Activities, he is concerned only with the Americanism of a Government economist. Plainly, he holds ballet dancing, of itself, to be un-American.

This is neither surprising nor in any way inconsistent with the record of the Dies Committee. Ballet dancing, for men at least, is an unconventional pastime. Very few hundred per cent, red-blooded Americans engage in it and they cannot help considering it vaguely indecent, like the British habit of sipping tea or the kissing of a lady's hand by some "furriner." To most of us the sight of a semi-nude gentleman doing a pas de bourree is faintly embarrassing. But to Martin Dies it is instantaneously enraging. For in the Dies philosophy eccentricity and un-Americanism are synonymous.

The effect of Martin Dies examinations into our Federal bureaucracy is to enforce upon it a rigid and sterile conformity. Wherever an individual departs by so much as a jot or a tittle from the narrow norm prescribed by the Dies outlook—whether it be in manners, morale, avocations or ideas—he is at once suspect. It may be, of course, that a man's devotion to the ballet interferes with his work as an economist. But such a conclusion calls for more evidence than Mr. Dies has ever taken the trouble to submit. It is possible for an ex-ballet dancer to become a good economist, just as it is possible for an ex-barroom porter to become a good poet laureate or for an ex-cowpuncher to become a good Congressman. There is room in our cosmos for diversity.

Achilles Heel

Ludendorff in his memoirs says that the fear of losing Rumania's oil after the defeat of Bulgaria caused the Kaiser and his general staff to sue for an armistice in 1918. A recurrence of that fear must have gone through Germany on the news of the tremendous American bombing of the Rumanian oil fields, which are vital to Germany's oil-thirsty war machines. The raid, which was undertaken by a force of 200 Liberators flown by 2000 specially selected American airmen, was based on African soil. Thus the round-trip consumed 2000 miles, and this is said to have been the longest round-trip flight of the war. If our airmen can do it once, they can do it again, though they seem to have done such a comprehensive wrecking job that there may be no need for further flights. At any rate, refineries, storage tanks, distilleries, and cracking plants are reported to have been gutted by bombings conducted at low level in daylight.

More immediate than the effects of the bombing on Germany are its effects on Italy and the Balkans. "The men of Rome" have already been put on notice that the breathing space is over, and what happened in Rumania is likewise beginning to happen in Italy. The Italian people, in other words, have been able to read in the burning fires of Rumania what is increasingly in store for their factories and communications centers unless they heed General Eisenhower's demand for unconditional surrender. In Rumania itself there will be the most profound forebodings. The fall of Mussolini was the definitive sign to the Rumanians—and the Bulgarians and Hungarians, too—that there is no chance left for Hitler. It follows that they must be looking around for a means to get out of the war, as the Bulgarians did in 1918, and the raid is bound to spur that quest.

Brig. Gen. Victor H. Strahm, chief of staff of the American Ninth Air Force, says that the raid probably "has materially affected the course of the war." That was not overplaying it. So many experts have been proved wrong on the length of time it would take to bring Germany to its knees for lack of oil that he would be rash who ventured any more guesses. But, circumstantially, Germany's situation must be growing weaker. Reserves were built up on the theory that resistance would not be long lived. To be sure, synthetic oil production must have been stepped up beyond anything the experts ever dreamed would be possible. But these plants have been the target of many an R. A. F. raid, and this constant hammering must have reduced output considerably. Upon Rumania the Germans put their reliance next to the synthetic plants; it is said that one-third of German requirements were met from Rumania. In addition to quantity, the quality of Rumanian oil was highly important to the Germans, since Rumanian oil has a far greater lubricant quotient than German synthetic oil. With this bombing airpower has struck its mightiest blow for victory against Hitler.

Victorious Smuts

With practically all the ballots in the recent South African general election now counted, it is clear that the people of that dominion have given an overwhelming vote of confidence to Premier Jan C. Smuts and his government. So whatever lingering doubts may have existed regarding the Union's determination to fight the war to the bitter end, have now been wiped out.

Four years ago, when the Union of South Africa faced the alternative of participating in the war or, like Eire, remaining neutral, the decision to join Great Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand was approved by a relatively narrow margin. The vote in the House of Assembly on this question was 67 for neutrality to 80 for war. The then Prime Minister, Gen. J. B. M. Hertzog, resigned, and was succeeded by Field Marshal Smuts. Under Smuts' great leadership, South Africa has made a real contribution to the common cause.

In the recent general election the voters of the Union had their first opportunity to express their opinion regarding the conduct of the war. The result was a one-sided victory for the government, which won 107 seats to 41 for the opposition, with 1 place still undecided. Field Marshal Smuts has good reason to be pleased at this outcome, and the people of South Africa are to be congratulated on their action.

RETURN

All that I was I gave you, never dreaming
Of a return; for it was love I gave,
As a wild star her sumptuous beauty streaming
In deep of night to a dark western wave.
It was my spirit that I yielded to you,
Surrendering body and soul; and asked no more
Than that my mystery none other knew
Should be the secret diadem you wore.

But love is richer than we ever know:
We lavish it, and love comes back to us
A thousandfold. How can I think it so?
How else? Our little child proclaims it thus;
For in him love returns, in flower and light,
More than I gave you in the glimmering night.

Tribute To Lin Sen

By George Kao

President Of China

MANY AMERICANS heard about the President of China for the first time when they read the news of the death last Sunday of the 79-year-old Mr. Lin Sen in Chungking.

The man who had been chairman of the national government of the Republic of China since 1932, and who nearly six years ago led his government from Nanking 1200 miles inland to a new capital at Chungking, was the epitome of self-effacement and dignity in high places. He was, for that very reason, universally loved and respected by his countrymen. Whether opening the People's Political Council, receiving the credentials of the new Russian Ambassador, ordering the arrest of puppet Wang Ching-wei, or cabling congratulations to Franklin D. Roosevelt upon his third inaugural, Lin Chu-hsi (as he is addressed in China) spoke and acted for the nation to a degree unattained by any previous President of the Republic.

As much as any soldier standing guard against a long-threatened, and now perhaps imminent Japanese drive on Chungking, it could be said of Lin Sen that his life was dedicated to his country. He was senator in the first Parliament formed in 1812 after the overthrow of the Manchu Dynasty. When it became apparent that a real revolution was still to be won Lin chose to devote himself to promoting that end from overseas as well as in South China. He was, in succession, a member of the legislative body of the revolutionary Kwangtung government, head of the Kwangtung River Conservancy, and Governor of Fukien (his native province). In 1923, he was elected member of the central executive committee of the Kuomintang.

Nanking Government

The successful establishment of the National Government in Nanking, in 1927, found Lin Sen one of a handful of elder statesmen of the party who were members of the state council, and above politics. During those hazardous days of the newly unified nation, he also found time to serve in various capacities, ranging from overseas affairs commissioner to chairman of the legislative Yuan. When, after 1931 and the beginning of Japanese aggression, Chiang Kai-shek resigned as chairman of the national government to turn his attention more and more to national defense in preparation for the war of resistance which was to come five years later, Lin Sen was the logical and unanimous choice for the highest office of the land. There he remained through several terms until he had come to personify China at peace just as Chiang is the Generalissimo of China at war.

Of the relationship between the two men, Professor Linebarger wrote in his first-hand study of the Chinese political system at work: "Generalissimo Chiang regularly reports on governmental activities to Lin Chu-hsi, addressing him attentively and respectfully. This is no perfunctory sham, but appears to be a very real search for advice and guidance. The two men are close associates and have been such for many years. During the Chungking bombings, the President has commonly resided in a secure place outside the city. He is not needed for the daily prosecution of the war, but both the office and its incumbent are strongly stabilizing factors in the national government."

Oblique Testimonial

A sort of oblique testimonial to Lin's importance to China came from the traitor Wang Ching-wei, of all people. When Wang set up his puppet regime in Nanking he kept the "Presidency" open for many months, pirating Lin Sen's name, hoping eventually to achieve legitimacy by converting its owner. Finally Wang gave up and gave himself the title—or rather the Japanese gave it to him, although they would have much preferred Lin!

Foreign observers, seeking to place the President of China, at times have likened Lin to Kalinin, President of the Soviet Union. The resemblance probably does not go beyond the wisp of long beard which both possess. On state occasions, Mr. Lin invariably was seen in his formal ma-kua, with a humane, scholarly demeanor which is all Chinese and his own. His preference for simple living made him shun the palatial residence built for him when the government was in Nanking, in favor of a rented house near the Kuomintang headquarters. He looked, and was a vegetarian. His hobbies were calligraphy, paintings and curios, of which he was a modest collector.

Two other things have given the Chinese cause to admire the character of their President in both his public and private life. When he was 30, Lin Sen's wife died, and he never married again. In all his years of government service he is not known to have ever placed in office one of his own men. As for himself, Lin Sen would be the first to dispute that it was, as one distinguished Chinese puts it, a case of the right man in the right place. But to the nation he was a symbol of Chinese hardiness under a placid surface—like the frost-proof chrysanthemums, the resilient bamboo and the knotty pine.

Will Germany Crack?

By Barnet Nover

Repercussions Of Italy's Debacle

OUTWARDLY the house that Hitler built still stands strong and firm, despite the heavy blows it has received of late.

As Winston Churchill recently reminded us, Hitler still has 300 German divisions, excluding satellites, three quarters of them mobile and most of them well-equipped. And despite the battering it has received in Russia and Tunisia, the German army is manifesting no symptoms of collapse. In Sicily as well as on the Eastern Front it has continued to fight on with vigor and determination even though robbed of all hope of victory.

The resources of almost an entire continent are still in German hands; German harvest prospects this year are not bad; and the Reich itself is dominated by a regime which pervades every form of activity and which will scruple at nothing to retain its power.

As Churchill has pointed out, we must not allow "this favorable inclination of our fortunes to blind us to the immensity of the task before us or of exertions still to be made and privations and trobulations still to be endured and overcome."

TAKING ALL this into account, the fact remains that Germany today is being subjected to severe stresses and strains, with the pressures steadily rising. And what is true of Germany is even more true of Germany's satellites, those buffer states, such as Bulgaria, Rumania, Hungary and Slovakia, whose loss would inevitably mean the certain and speedy collapse of the Reich.

It is for this reason that the impact of the Italian debacle on Germany cannot solely be measured in terms of what the Reich is being deprived as a result of that development.

Germany's immediate losses are many and important: (1) the loss of forward bases deep in the Mediterranean; (2) a shield against possible Allied invasion of Germany and the Balkans; (3) Italian garrison troops in Yugoslavia, Greece, the Dodecanese and France; (4) a certain amount of war production; (5) some agricultural imports; (6) certain raw materials, such as sulphur; and (7) an important reservoir of workers.

BUT THIS DOES not tell the whole story, by any means.

The psychological and strategic consequences of the collapse of fascism and with it the collapse of Italy as an Axis partner may prove even more considerable.

Mussolini went out, "not with a bang, but with a whimper." When put to the test his regime proved to be made not of granite, but of papier mache, and despite all the evidences of the Third Reich's continuing strength, people all over Europe, including the Germans themselves, must be asking themselves whether Hitler will go the same way. In the meantime, neither the Germans nor their remaining satellites are being allowed to forget the growing power of the Allies.

The fall of Mussolini coincided with an attack on Hamburg which exceeded in destructiveness anything the Germans ever did. Hamburg today is a city that was. And the inhabitants of every other important city in the Reich, including Berlin, are wondering if they are next on the list.

HITHERTO the Balkans have been relatively immune to the ravages of Allied air power. That is no longer true, and Hitler's satellites know it.

On Sunday a great force of American Liberators carried out a low-level attack on the Ploesti district in Rumania, the region from which Germany gets about a third of her oil requirements. The bombers flew 2000 or more miles to reach their target and return.

Once the Allies come into possession of southern Italy, which canont be long delayed, the Rumanian oil fields will be only half as far away from Allied bombing bases as they are now.

INDEED, from a place such as Bari, on Italy's southeastern coast, all of Hungary, half of Rumania and all of Bulgaria can be bombed with ease.

Bari is only around 550 air-miles from Bucharest, around 575 miles from Budapest, less than 350 miles from Sofia. And even if the Germans entrench themselves in the Po Valley, as they are trying to do, the Allies will soon be able to reach Vienna and Munich without too great an effort.

Because of the importance of Ploesti the Germans kept a considerable air force and a great concentration of antiaircraft in its vicinity. That explains the relatively high percentage of losses our air force sustained on that raid, although the raiders got through and did tremendous damage.

We can take it for granted, however, that Germany is in no position to provide every vulnerable point in the Balkans with the same protection. If she doesn't the smaller satellites may collapse even more rapidly than Italy did. And if she does, or tries to, she will have to deprive German cities of the protection they now receive, inadequate as that protection is proving to be.

Viewed from whatever angle, therefore, the Italian debacle is a devastating blow to the Reich. But its secondary consequences may prove even more destructive than its immediate effects. Watch the Balkans.

Insolent Treatment

That housewives of America are among the Nation's most patriotic citizens cannot be disputed. Cheerfully, they adapt themselves to the burdens of rationing: The tedious process of selecting, making the "points" reach; the long waiting in line; stunning prices to pay; the carrying home of the heavy bundles.

Women are not complaining of this, their job, their contribution to the cause. They do protest, however, against the insolent treatment they often receive at the hands of those who serve, the persons behind the counter, men and women, snappy and snippy. Those ill-bred individuals who mistake discourtesy for efficiency should be instructed that politeness requires no more time than rudeness. That goes for all employes everywhere. It means those who serve in public eating places, in offices, and elsewhere. It means those streetcar operators who drive as though bent to exterminate the Huns and Japs. That driver who ignores the value of human life, who, in a dangerous emergency, fails to slacken his speed—what can we say of him?

Speed has become a fetish. Money making (or getting) has become a passion. There is no time for the things that make for peace. After this war is over we're going to have peace. Reader, peace is a product of right attitudes in human relations, and it must begin in the individual before ever it can be realized between nations.

Catholic View

I am prompted as a Catholic and by the excellent letter of Lieut. Comdr. R. N. V. R. Kenneth Downey to express my regret at the furor raised by the high-ranking Catholic clergy of the United States regarding the bombing of Rome.

Every civilized person regrets the destruction of the churches of any city, but the gentlemen of the Catholic Church, who have expressed themselves, give the impression that they are more concerned over unintentional bombing of a shrine in Rome than with the fact that the bombing of the railroad yards (which they fail to mention) has kept both German and Italian soldiers from reaching the soldiers of the Allied Nations. Truly the life of one of our boys is worth many thousand monuments. ALBERT J. MITCHELL.

President's Speech

It is with great regret that I review the significance of the speech of the President of the United States. I looked forward to this speech as a landmark in eloquence only to find that he had seen fit to sandwich in a cheap political trick which transcended all other noble aspirations and general declarations that he had to make.

For several years I have hoped and almost prayed that President Roosevelt would really rise to the stature of a truly great man, particularly in view of the fact that he had decided to break a precedent in becoming the third term President although predecessors had rejected this dubious honor because of what they thought was best for a democratic form of government. President Roosevelt has continually failed and tonight in making his bid for a fourth term has violated all principles of a noble leader in using the office of the President of the United States as a vehicle to obtain a fourth term for his political regime.

Specifically I refer to his program for benefiting the ten or eleven million men in the armed forces of the United States.

It appears to me that this is no time for the introduction of a program benefiting specifically the men in the armed forces since the President himself admits that he was not sure of any definite determination of the war between the years 1943-1949. Obviously, his assurance of particular favors to men in the armed forces was issued with political intent only.

'Antics in Semantics'

Your editorial entitled "Antics in Semantics" in the morning's Post is unfortunate. You have confused "semantics" the science which deals with the meaning of words with the science of "General Semantics" which is the study of how human beings react to words.

Don't you think it would be a fine idea for the Editors to know what they are writing about before they attempt to write an editorial on the subject?

Relying In God

We enjoyed reviews of Walter Lippman's book "U. S. Foreign Policy" and its condensation in the Readers Digest. It is timely and discusses the important topic in a rationalistic and patriotic manner. It appeals to the intelligenzia and also to the average well educated individual.

It would have seemed quite incongruous in this book to mention the Author of the universe and ruler of this little planet. For many writers, politicians and most intellectuals, God does not exist, has no interest in this world nor in this war. Yet Jefferson and Lincoln acknowledged God and His wisdom and our dependence upon Him.

All the schemes for a postwar world or any schemes will fail as surely as God is left out of calculations. As surely as any one thinks that the brains of this country or any combination of brains and countries can solve the problems resulting from these conflicts, just so surely will he fail. Many people will be much surprised when it is discovered what God will do and what will happen, and be gratified afterward to find there is a God Who kept all His promises, and they are all in the Bible, plain to read.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mile By Mile

LIPPMANN

THERE ARE NOW very good reasons for asking whether the State Department and the White House have not been making their political plans in accordance with a military estimate which the actual events are overriding. To put it bluntly, the question is whether the European war is going to end in the way that official Washington has been assuming that it is going to end.

If the military predictions and assumptions have been incorrect, then the political plans made to fit these assumptions are bound to be unworkable.

AMGOT is the short title of the system of military government we have established in the occupied territory of Sicily. It was intended among other things to avert the kind of political difficulty which we ran into in North Africa. Amgot embodies the principles which were adopted after several months of discussion, and there can be little doubt that it was meant to be the political program we would follow as we advanced into Europe. But the events in Italy have already compelled Mr. Churchill, Mr. Roosevelt, and General Eisenhower to modify radically, if not to abandon, the fundamental conception of Amgot.

For Amgot is a system of military government modeled upon the British occupation of the conquered Italian colonies in Africa. It rests upon the idea that with Allied soldiers in undisputed control of the whole population, the civil administration of the country can be carried on by local officials acting under military orders from the commanding general. This system has worked very well in the Italian African Empire. It has worked well in Sicily. But we know now that it cannot be made to work in Italy as a whole. We know it from the Prime Minister, who said that we must spare our armies "the burden of occupying mile by mile the entire country" and the "immense task of garrisoning, policing, and administering" it. We know it from the President's and from General Eisenhower's statements that we shall treat with the House of Savoy and with any government which is not that of the Fascist Party. In short, it is admitted that General Alexander and Amgot cannot govern Italy, and that we need some kind of provisional Italian government.

THE QUESTION which I am venturing to raise is this: how did we ever come to suppose that we could govern any considerable part of Europe as the British are governing the Italian colonies in Africa? The answer, I venture to suggest quite tentatively, is at bottom that the President's chief military advisers have assumed that we would have to fight our way into Germany mile by mile across Italy, across occupied France, and wherever else they decided to strike. They are soldiers who, however much they were willing to try the experiment of the strategic use of air power, have—quite rightly of course—prepared also for a decision by the ground forces. But are the President and the State Department right in taking the views of the ground soldiers as their political gospel? For in Italy at least what has actually happened is that the regime collapsed, and the military resistance disintegrated, before a single soldier set foot on the mainland.

NOW IF Europe has to be invaded mile by mile, then it follows that we shall have to govern the liberated territory mile by mile. The liberated territory will be in the immediate theater of war, and obviously only the commanding general can govern in the theater of war.

But if, on the other hand, great national territories fall out of the war before we actually invade them, if the proponents of strategic air power prove to be right, then the actual problem of governing in Europe is quite different from that which Amgot presupposes. For Amgot is set up to govern territory which the soldiers have already occupied. Italy shows us that much territory will certainly have to be governed which our soldiers will not and cannot occupy.

THERE ARE strong reasons for thinking that what has happened in Italy is a truer basis for estimating what is to come than is the mile by mile military doctrine of the ground forces which underlies Amgot, our French policy, and the official feelings of the White House and State Department toward the governments-in-exile. Washington's political policy toward Europe has been based on the notion that Europe would be liberated slowly and bit by bit by elaborate land campaigns. Therefore official Washington has been assuming that we must and that we can govern this gradually liberated territory under strictly military rule and that we need not be bothered by the difficulties of consulting and dealing seriously with the representatives of the occupied nations until the fighting ends.

But what if these military assumptions are wrong? If it is true that Germany has no strategic reserves left, if it is true that air power can strike more and more effectively at the heart, leaving the limbs to wither, if it is true that not only the allied nations but the satellite nations are on the verge of open rebellion, then the Hitlerite order in Europe may collapse before the British, the American, and the Russian ground forces can actually advance deeply into occupied Europe.

If Italy is a model of the shape of things to come, then long before our armies are established all over Europe, the Balkans, Norway, and Central Europe, the German power will have collapsed in these lands. If that is what is going to happen, then our present political policy will produce anarchy. For we shall have neglected the development of provisional government to which we give provisional but strong support.

FOR THESE reasons it is imperative to ask whether our official policy is based on a correct military estimate of the war, and to plead that the assumptions of our official policy be thoroughly and sincerely reexamined. If they are wrong, we are courting grave military risks. In order to carry the war to its final phase against Germany, dare we, with the Italian experience before us, pull down rather than build up the authority of those who, in the immediate future, may be indispensable in setting up provisional governments in the suddenly liberated nations?

Are we not courting, also, tremendous risks to the social order of Europe? For if the occupied nations are liberated suddenly, if Amgot is unworkable, if there are not ready provisional governments which we have fostered and befriended, then are we not creating a political vacuum? Are we not inviting that very anarchy and civil war which we all hope to avoid?

Sicily Cash Flown There

By Donald Kovacic
Associated Press Staff Writer

New Invasion Issue

Anglo-American military currency made its bow in the Allied occupation of Sicily to provide the monetary pattern for future occupations in Europe.

A joint Treasury-War Department announcement told the story yesterday of how Great Britain and the United States decided on a distinctive, vari-colored money to be carried into enemy lands.

The first issue, which the departments said spoke "a 'lira' language that will be understood by every Sicilian trader and consumer," presumably will be followed by issues speaking the "franc," "reichsmark" and other money languages now familiar to the millions under the Nazi heel.

Basic Design Planned

Differing from previous invasion moneys, the new Allied military currency is entirely distinctive. And, with an eye to future operations, a basic design was arranged "so that it might be adapted to the needs of troops in further assaults upon Hitler's European fortress merely by overprinting the proper currency designation and name of country on the basic stock."

The currency is in two sizes. For the Italian series the smaller size—about half that of American notes—was printed in denominations of 1, 2, 5 and 10 lire. A wheat field scene in brown appears on the face, with the denomination printed in the center. Blue, lavender, green and black borders identify the respective denominations.

The larger size, comparable to American currency, was used for notes of 50, 100, 500 and 100 lire denominations, with borders and design in blue, lavender, green and black, respectively, against a pale blue background.

Description of Money

The words "Allied Military Currency" and "Issued in Italy" appear on all notes, while on the reverse side of the "Four Freedoms"—freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom from want and freedom from fear—carry the message of the Atlantic Charter to the liberated lands.

Actual planning of the job began some four months ago at a highly secret series of conferences between high American and British officials. Designs were completed under similar conditions of secrecy.

Basic printing began early in June, with presses kept in operation 24 hours a day. On Monday, July 19, when two planes carrying seven tons of the money took off. They arrived in Sicily the following Thursday. Other shipments of both currency and special postage stamps have followed.

Argentina Shuts Paper For Slap at Roosevelt

Buenos Aires, Aug. 2 (AP).—The pro-Axis newspaper, Bandera Argentine, has been ordered suspended for 10 days because of "insulting comment against the chief of state of a friendly nation," the government announced tonight.

Under the headline "insolent ultimatum," the paper yesterday published comment on President Roosevelt's Friday statement asking neutrals not to give refuge to Axis leaders.

Wartime Spree On Borrowed Funds

PUSEY

WHEN Americans are fighting and dying, when dictatorships are toppling, and each day brings victory a little closer, it is difficult to arouse any sustained interest in the peril that is steadily engulfing us on the home front. That is natural enough, for the people are rightly concerned above all else with winning the war. Yet the rising mountain of purchasing power which cannot be spent for things that we normally buy is such a menace to every man's future that we cannot close our eyes to it without inviting disaster upon our heads.

The latest clear warning against this peril comes from the President's statement on the budget. "Individuals are expected to receive incomes approaching 150 billion dollars during fiscal year 1944," he points out, "over twice the income payments to individuals in fiscal year 1940." In peacetime this might indicate that the Nation had attained its most hopeful dream of wealth. People would be spending lavishly for homes, automobiles, travel, and a great assortment of luxuries. But everyone knows that this fabulous purchasing power has been poured into the hands of the people only because of the war and that they can spend only part of it for things they wish to buy because few civilian goods are now being produced. More than one-half of our total labor force, the President says, is either in the armed services or engaged in war production.

So we are building a mountain of spending power on one hand and a mountain of Federal debt on the other. A great part of the money which the Government is paying out to the people is being borrowed from the people and the banks. If no new taxes are enacted, the President says, we will add 69 billion dollars to our national debt in a single year. That will bring the debt to a total of 206 billion dollars by next June. Merely to pay the interest on this debt, at the average rate of 2 per cent, will cost four billion dollars a year, or more than the entire Government spent in 1933.

A DEBT of such magnitude will be a heavy drag upon the readjustments and reconstruction that must follow the war. In other words, the outpouring of funds for war supplies is creating not one dilemma, but two. We are actually borrowing billions and mortgaging our future to create surplus purchasing power that only encourages black markets and run-away inflation. Obviously that doesn't make sense.

Cold logic demands that we stop borrowing money to get ourselves into a jam. But that would necessitate a reduction of wages and profits—a course that is not politically feasible, at least so far as wages are concerned. Probably the most that can be reasonably demanded is that further additions to the mountain of unusable purchasing power be halted and that ways and means of recovering these funds to pay the cost of the war be quickly devised.

Reduction of our standard of living is already an accomplished fact. This has come about, as the President points out, through rationing and other controls, plus higher taxes. No boost in wages, no consumer subsidies or other means of pouring more surplus cash into the pockets of the people will increase the supplies of beef, steel or gasoline available to the public. In short, we cannot escape this lower standard of living without crippling the war effort, and the war effort must not be crippled. So there is no point in pouring more surplus purchasing power into the pockets of the people—no point except to create an illusion that they are better off than they actually are.

Our tragic mistake is that we have not been willing to face unpleasant realities. In his budget message the President clearly recognized this excess of income over the supply of goods, and went so far as to say that "the cost of living cannot be stabilized unless price and wage controls are supported by a further substantial absorption of purchasing power." Yet when labor lobbyists have turned on the pressure he has consistently supported schemes that would lift surplus purchasing power to still greater heights.

IT IS NO compliment to the American people to assume that they have to be coddled and pampered in wartime at the risk of economic chaos when peace returns. But what has been done cannot be undone. The mountain of excess purchasing power cannot be wiped out by pointing to the fallacies of the policy under which it was built up. The only feasible course left to the Government is to reabsorb through taxes and the sale of bonds to the public the funds which it has let slip through its fingers.

The President came to that conclusion in his budget statement. But his call for new taxes shows only a fraction of the vigor he recently displayed in calling for rollback subsidies that would put a new capstone on the mountain of excess purchasing power. Is there no leader in or out of the Administration who has the courage to fight for general participation of the public in the sacrifices of war?

Citizens on the home front, who have been spared all the physical hazards of war, are not even required to give up their surplus dollars—the excess of purchasing power which the Government itself has poured into their pockets. If any statesman were candid enough to propose that one group of citizens be sent abroad to risk their lives in the common defense while the purses of others remaining at home be swollen by borrowed money far in excess of what they can reasonably spend in wartime, we would think him insane. Yet that is precisely the policy which our Government is continuing to follow, without much protest from the public.

Army Action Makes Clothes Rationing Remote

More than 10 million additional yards of woolen and worsted fabrics will be made available for civilian use during the last four months of this year under arrangements announced yesterday whereby Army procurements will be reduced 50 per cent from September through December.

This action made the probability of clothes rationing more remote than ever as War Production Board officials already have a program of conservation and standardiztion designed to eliminate clothes hardships in civilian ranks.

Under the new allotment of fabrics, arranged by WPB and the War Department, consumers will have greater amounts of such items as men's mackinaws, work jackets, children's legging sets, blankets, and other necessary apparel.

WBB and Army officials agreed on the plan when it was found a substantial proportion of Army requirements for woolen and worsted products during the last third of this year could be deferred until the first four months of 1944.

The Quartermaster Corps is advising the mills providing these Army goods that they may reschedule their deliveries to effect a 50 per cent cut from September through December if they submit a schedule satisfactory to the Army. The move, it was said, will not affect military-lend-lease items.

While raw wool stocks for civilian production have been ample during the last few months, it was pointed out, the chief bottleneck to increased civilian production has been the lack of spinning and weaving facilities and manpower.

Through cutting back Army procurements temporarily, it is expected facilities for civilian production will be increased and maximum use of the raw wool stocks will be assured.

Bashore Heads Reclamation Unit

Secretary Ickes announced yesterday the appointment of Harry W. Bashore as commissioner of reclamation in the Interior Department, succeeding John C. Page, who resigned on account of ill health. Bashore, in the Reclamation Bureau for 37 years, had been assistant commissioner since 1939.

William E. Warne, the Interior Department's director of Information, was made assistant reclamation commissioner, succeeding Bashore. Robert W. Horton, a special assistant to the Secretary, was made director of information.

OPA Maps Lower Ceilings On New Brands of Liquor

By the Associated Press

A new liquor price regulation, expected to result in lower prices for many new brands now on the market, will be issued in the near future by the Office of Price Administration.

The regulation will provide ceilings at the distillery level based on cost plus a fixed mark-up, with mark-ups at each stage thereafter until it reaches the ultimate consumer.

OPA officials said yesterday they were unable to estimate the reductions which will result, although some of them may be sizable. Liquor prices now are under the general maximum price regulation, which fixes ceilings at the highest prices in March, 1942, but new brands coming on the market since then are priced according to a formula based on the "nearest competitive" brand.

Most of the liquor now on the shelves of retailers consists of new brands, and some of these brands are selling at prices approximating the March, 1942, prices of well-known bonded liquors.

The OPA several weeks ago started an inquiry into skyrocketing liquor prices, and the new regulation fixing maximums on actual cost plus a mark-up is the result of the investigation.

How to Speed Payroll Accounting

—to offset the manpower shortage

MANAGEMENT knows that time is, today, the most critical of all war materials. Only through better use of time can management make up for the shortage of workers.

That's why Shaw-Walker's new developments in faster-functioning office systems are so important today. For example, the Shaw-Walker Payroll System saves time in the increasingly complex work of payroll handling, especially since the new withholding tax has gone into effect.

▲ THIS NEW PLAN effects a tremendous saving of man-hours that war demands have made so precious.

As you write one payroll record, all figures are automatically transferred to the two or more other essential records that you now write in separate operations.

After each individual payroll entry, every record you need is complete, correct and up-to-date—ready for quarterly reports and government inspection. Rewriting of figures is entirely eliminated.

Entirely eliminated, too, are separate records for War Bonds, Social Security, Withholding Tax, employee insurance, employee hospitalization, union dues and all other ledger records of a similar nature.

Every pay day the statement you give to each employee includes:

(1) A complete record of earnings.

(2) A detailed list of deductions.

(3) A notice telling the worker the exact amount he has on deposit with you toward his next War Bond.

ALL MADE AT ONE WRITING: pay checks, employee pay statement, social security and withholding tax record, War Bond Record, ledger record of other deductions, check register and payroll summary.

▲ SO SIMPLE is the "KOPI-SPOT" payroll system that any clerk can handle it. It can be adapted to any type of payroll whether you pay by check or in cash—whether you make your entries by typewriter or by hand.

▲ A COMPLETE FOLDER has been prepared, illustrating the "KOPI-SPOT" and explaining its application to various payroll methods. May we send you a copy of it?

FOR THE DURATION any old file will do—it's the system itself that counts!

AFTER THE WAR transfer the system intact to any of the following:

A SHAW-WALKER FILING CABINET—the file that's "Built Like a Skyscraper." Result of 40 years of Shaw-Walker experience.

A SHAW-WALKER FIRE FILE—the steel file with built-in fire protection. It gives safe-like security, even in severe fires.

OR THE DRAWERS of the Shaw-Walker steel desk. This is the famous new low desk for comfort and hard work.

Haefner Halts Browns' Rally, Nats Win, 4-3

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

When the Brooklyn Dodgers rescended into third place the other day, it marked the first time in three years that they did not rate one-two in the National League race. Under the aegis of Branch Rickey, the Dodgers have been something less than a success and the situation seems to be worsening.

POVICH

Rickey was supposed to be the high-powered gent who as successor to Larry McPhail would contrive to keep the Dodgers up there, but beyond selling off a cluster of the Dodgers' high-salaried talent he hasn't achieved much. Rickey is making a showing with the bankers, perhaps, but the fans aren't quite delighted.

Rickey's tactics smack of his regime as general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals. He was always able to show a nice profit for the Cardinals by unloading his big-salaried stars like Dizzy Dean and Ducky Medwick for fancy prices and in the same stroke getting out from under the payroll overhead. Rickey's Cardinal teams worked for "peasant pay.", But they continued to win pennants and Rickey became known as a shrewd operator.

At Brooklyn, though, Rickey does not have the far-flung farm system the Cardinals owned, and replacements do not come as easy for him. Brooklyn baseball writers think there will be a day of reckoning when Rickey ends up with a respectable showing for the bankers who own the team but without much ball team to show for his profits.

Already this season, the Dodgers' home attendance is reported to be more than 200,000 less than last year. That is probably one factor for Rickey's retrenchment proceedings. He has already lopped off the payroll such as Buck Newsom, Ducky Medwick, Dolf Camilli, Johnny Allen and Freddie Fitzsimmons whose salaries aggregate more than $50,000 a year.

Unlike his St. Louis tactics, though, Rickey hasn't been getting fancy prices for his higher-salaried players. He sold Dizzy Dean and Ducky Medwick for $175,000 each, but there is doubt that he received even half of that figure for all the Brooklyn players he has sold. Medwick supposedly brought only little more than the $7500 waiver price but Rickey was able to show a great saving, nevertheless.

Medwick's sale was a stroke that would please the Dodgers' income tax consultants. Old ball players can be devaluated just like old automobiles. Depreciation for tax purposes can be shown. Rickey can show that the Dodgers took a rap when they sold Medwick, who cost them $175,000, for around $7500. The money saved in taxes made the deal profitable for Brooklyn.

McPhail's tactics were in great contrast to Rickey's, however, and much more successful. When the Dodgers under McPhail needed more power, he bought Medwick for $175,000. When McPhail thought another pitcher could win the pennant for them last season, he gave Clark Griffith $35,000 for Buck Newsom. McPhail spent the bankers' money freely and then got it all back for them, and more, by putting them into the World Series and setting new attendance records for the National League.

Under McPhail there could have been no such occurrence as the players' rebellion, either. McPhail, unlike the scholarly Rickey, would have barged into the players' dressing room and settled the mess simply by outshouting everybody. McPhail would have brought order out of chaos by telling the strikers off in meeting and not to the outside world.

Rickey isn't Brooklyn's kind of a guy anyway. The Flatbush fans could understand a man like McPhail who blew his topper and had it over with. Rickey is too much of a pedagogue. Brooklyn fans don't give a heck about the bank balance of the Dodgers. They are governed by what the league standings say. Obviously they don't like it when the Dodgers are in third place.

The deal that sent Dolf Camilli to the Giants for Joe Orengo, the Giants' first baseman, was at best a thinly-veiled trade to put more dough in the Dodgers' bank account and get them out from under Camilli's big salary which is estimated at $20,000. The reason the Giants wanted Camilli is because Oregno couldn't play first base, but that's what the Dodgers ended up with, a reformed third baseman who can't play first.

Orengo is a nice guy, but by trade is a third baseman, and not such a hot one at that. Camilli despite his hitting slump is still the fanciest first baseman in the National League and Brooklyn fans won't like it when they see Orengo making a mess of balls that Camilli used to dig out the dirt as a matter of course. Rickey may have made his peace with the bankers, but he still may have the Brooklyn fans to contend with.

Delayed Defense Action

Bucky Harris Nominates Cox As the 'All-American Jerk'

Bucky Harris, dismissed manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, declared yesterday if there is a "jerk" connected with the Phillies it is William D. Cox, president of the baseball club. And he, said Harris, is an all-American jerk, according to the Associated Press.

This was Harris' reaction to an eight-page statement Cox made public in Philadelphia last night which accused Harris of referring to the Phillies as a "seventh-place club" and to the players as "those jerks." Cox's statement also quoted Harris as saying he had no intention of running "a school for ball players."

"It has taken Cox three days to get together a complete set of lies for his own defense," Harris told reporters on arrival at his home here.

"There isn't anything that can be done about it, said Harris, such things being part of the game, but "it is amazing how one person could figure out so many lies."

"If I had said any of those things, I certainly would be the first to admit them," Harris said.

The only accusation by Cox that "has a semblance of truth is the one about the Phillies being a seventh-place club," Harris said.

"At a meeting when the team's chances in the pennant race came up for discussion, I said we had a very good chance of beating out Boston and New York but we probably would have to stop there," Harris said.

As to not running "a school for ball players," Harris said, "can you imagine me or any other manager saying that; certainly I would do everything expected of a manager in bringing the players and team along."

Cox's statement expressed regret

Harris Doesn't Want To Prolong Dispute

Bucky Harris told The Post yesterday that "in some manner I hope that my controversy with Owner Bill Cox of the Phillies will be brought to a close."

"I have no control over any statements that Cox may make," said Harris, "but I do not wish to prolong the incident of my release. For the good of the Philadelphia team, and in the interests of baseball, I desire to make no further comment. I was forced to defend myself against Cox's preposterous charges, else I would have made no reply to them."

Athletics Score Twice to Triumph After Sox Tallied 3 Times in First

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 2.—A two-run rally in the eighth inning gave the Philadelphia Athletics a 5-to-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox here tonight.

In gaining their only verdict in the five-game series with the Chicagoans, the A's took advantage of a costly error by Jimmy Grant. After Johnny Welaj had singled, Jojo White laid down a sacrifice, but Grant tossed the ball into center field, permitting Welaj to score. White advanced on Elmer Valo's sacrifice and romped home on a single by Dick Siebert.

Wally Moses, leading base stealer in the American League, pilfered three more sacks to raise his total to 33. He had six thefts in the series.

Two District Records Broken in Swim Meet

1200, Largest Crowd in D. C. History Attends A. Earle Weeks Memorial Event

The largest crowd ever to attend a swimming meet in the District—1200 paid admissions—saw two District swimming records fall last night as top swimmers throughout the East invaded the Takoma Recreation Center pool for the first A. Earle Weeks Memorial swimming meet.

The aquatic tournament was designed as a memorial to the late Earle Weeks, former president of the District A. A. U. and noted sportsman. The display of swimming talent and the enthusiasm of the audience showed that the initial event succeeded in its aim.

Peggy Pate Winner

Standout event of the evening was the 100-yard breast-stroke for women, in which Peggy Pate, 15-year-old star from the Goldsboro (N. C.) Athletic Association, shaved 2.2 seconds from the District record. Her time was 1:20.8.

Lorraine Fischer of New York, holder of 19 swimming records and favored for the event, swam a close second, but was a tenth of a second behind the former District record of 1:23. Betty Roland of the Shoreham Club, who had held the District record, placed third, and will receive the first-place Weeks Trophy for District swimmers. Betty Essex of Shoreham and Calva Kephart of Ambassador placed fourth and fifth.

Beat District Record

Two out-of town swimmers, Bill Wright of the North Branch Y. M. C. A., Philadelphia, and Henry Steingass of the Knights of Columbus, Baltimore, beat the District record in the 100-yard free-style for men. Wright swam the distance in a fast .57.1 and Steingass was right behind him with a .57.3.

The toppled record was .57.6, held by Gene Cummey of the Ambassador team, who was a late scartch in the race.

Ensign Edward Pope of the Shoreham Club was third, first among the locals, doing the time in 1 minute flat. District runners-up were Joe LaSalle of the Ambassador Club and Lou Kitzman of Shoreham.

Biggest upset was in the 100-yard women's backstroke, when Leola Thomas of the Ambassador Club slid to photo-finish tenth of a second victory over National Backstroke Champion Helen Perry, an ensign in the WAVES, who was swimming under the Shoreham Club banner.

Ambasador Scores

The Ambassador Club took top honors in points in both the open and District classes, taking six trophies in all.

Dr. O. U. Singer, president of the District A. A. U. presented the trophies and medals to the winners and presented a plaque to Mrs. A. Earle Weeks, widow of the former sports figure.

Late Col. Moret Is Honored; Ex-Navy Star

Lieut. Col. Paul Moret, former football coach at the United States Naval Academy, has been awarded posthumously the Legion of Merit, the Navy announced yesterday.

Moret, whose home was in Jackson, Mich., was killed June 8 in the South Pacific when an airplane in which he was a passenger crashed during a takeoff. His wife, Mrs. Dorothy Josephine Moret, and 9-year-old son, Mickey, have been living in Coronado, Calif.

A graduate of the Naval Academy, Moret coached football at Annapolis in 1930 and 1935. As a midshipman he was a star end on the Middies team and an intercollegiate heavyweight boxing champion. In 1933 he coached and played on the West Coast Marine team at San Diego.

He became the youngest squadron commander in Marine history three years ago at the age of 33. He led his unit only once on a combat mission encountering no opposition. Later he was assigned to direct Guadalcanal aerial operations.

His citation for the Legion of Merit told of outstanding service as aircraft operations officer on Guadalcanal from November 12, 1942, to January 20, 1943.

Two walks and Ken Keltner's single gave the American League team a run in the first inning, the only run until the eighth when the Coast Guardsmen tied it up.

Three hits and walk gave the Indians a pair of runs in the ninth and the ball game.

Pirates Win On Gustine's Single, 5 to 4

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 2.—Frankie Gustine rapped out a single with two men out in the ninth inning tonight, scoring Elbie Fletcher, who had doubled, and gave the Pirates a 5-to-4 victory over the Braves. The victory boosted the Buds' grip on second place to two full games over the Dodgers, who were idle.

The Braves had a four-run lead going into the fifth when Bob Elliott lashed out a triple to score two mates and Johnny Barrett came through with a double in the seventh, scoring two more runs and tying the game.

Hank Gornicki was credited with the triumph as Bob Klinger was lifted for a pinch hitter in the Pirate eighth.

Manager Frankie Frisch, Rip Sewell and Tommy O'Brien were ejected from the Pirate bench in the fourth inning following an argument on a batted ball the Pirates claimed struck Bill Weitelmann. The game was delayed eight minutes during the argument.

Jordan Olivar Named Villanova Football Coach

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 2.—Jordan Olivar, former Villanova College tackle, tonight was named head football coach at Villanova to succeed Maurice J. (Clipper) Smith, now a captain in the United States Marines.

Since graduation from Villanova in 1938, Olivar has coached high school teams at Radnor, N. J., and Roman Catholic High School, Philadelphia.

Tribe Claims 19-Game Victor With Orioles

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 2.—Ed (Specs) Klieman, the Baltimore Oriole sinker-ball sensation, will be claimed by the Cleveland Indians by August 15 under a working agreement with the International League club, Cleveland Vice President Peckinpaugh announced tonight.

Peckinpaugh said the Indians-Orioles arrangement permits Cleveland to pick two Baltimore players before August 15, at a price of not more than $10,000 each.

The Baltimore front office rates its 19-game winner in the $50,000 class.

Peckinpaugh said the bespectacled Klieman was sold to Baltimore last spring by the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Three-Eye League team for $750, and added the 24-year-old sensation had never been signed to an Indian contract.

The Cleveland executive said Klieman would remain with Baltimore for the remainder of the International League season, and probably would join the Tribe next spring.

Klieman, whose sinker ball drops about 10 inches when it breaks over the plate, is a native of Norwood, Ohio, and won 17 and lost 6 for Cedar Rapids last year. With Baltimore he has been defeated only five times while ringing up 19 triumphs.

Clary Gets Worst Of Rough Stuff With Galehouse; Kreevich Goat

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The time has come to speak a bit more respectfully of the Nats. They have now achieved a five-game winning streak No. 5 accrued last night with the Browns still in town. The score wasn't much, 4 to 3, but it was thoroughly acceptable.

Mickey Haefner saw the Nats home with a six-hit pitching job against the skidding Brownies. The Nats scored the first fo r runs of the game and the Browns the last three. Haefner had to stave 'em off in the late innings, and they had the tying run on base in the ninth when he whipped a third strike past Kreevich to bring matters to a happy conclusion.

Haefner didnt' limit himself to the pitching. He whacked in a very important run for himself against Denny Galehouse with a three-bagger against the left field wall in the fourth inning. The 5119 customers were very much pleased with that big hit by the little lefthander.

Moore Gets Big Hit

Gene Moore was hot stuff again last night. He made one of the Nats' seven hits, but he knocked in two runs with it, a single to center in the third inning to improve the Nats' lead at that point to 3-0.

Little Ellis Clary enlivened the ball game for himself and the customers in the sixth inning with a throw-back to the rough-and-ready era of baseball. Clary assumed he was dusted off when Galehouse sent him into the dirt with a high, fast one inside in the fourth inning, and there was meanness in his eye when he came to bat in the sixth.

He pushed a bunt down the first-base line and drew Galehouse into his path. But the Browns' big pitcher was not unprepared. When Clary bumped him viciously, Galehouse gave him the shoulder and the little third baseman went sprawling on his face in foul territory, besides being tagged out. Clary wanted to fight, but Umpire Bill Grieve shooed him away.

Laabs Tripies

Until the seventh inning, Haefner was pitching two-hit, shut-out ball, but any notion he may have been nursing were parred out of his head when Chet Laabs tripled off the leftfield wall to start the seventh. Haefner wild pitched him home to give the Browns their first run.

He pitched himself out of trouble in the eighth after Kreevich reached base with none out on Sullivan's wild throw, and Pinch-

Mioland Wins Belmont's Checkmate 'Cap the Hard Way

Veteran Bay Barely Noses Out Corydon

Royal Nap Third; Howard Horse's Victory Presages Return to Form

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., Aug. 2.—C. S. Howard's stakes veteran Mioland, beaten in 10 previous outings this year, finally came through with a hard-earned triumph in the Checkmate (class B) Handicap as the second week of the Saratoga meeting began here this afternoon.

The big bay 6-year-old barely nosed out Greentree's Corydon, another old-timer, at the end of a mile and a furlong completed in 1:49 4-5. The Lazy F Ranch's 3-year-old, Royal Nap, was headed out of the place in the role of favorite.

Ted Atkinson, riding hero of the recent Empire-at-Jamaica session, chalked up a double by virtue of his score astride Mioland. The latter returned $7.30 for $2. The event was witnessed by 16,479 fans.

In his previous outing, Mioland had closed powerfully to finish third. That effort presaged an early return to winning form for the Oregon-bred campaigner. The Howard color bearer had more early foot today, but needed all the help Atkinson could give him. Corydon, back from an unsuccessful invasion of Washington Park, came up with one of his best efforts.

Copperman led for more than a quarter-mile, while Mioland was disputing second position with Grey Wing. Corydon was last in the field of six. He started to move on the leaders before reaching the bend. Mioland disposed of Copperman after a half-mile. He couldn't get clear, for Corydon joined him for a head-and-head duel that lasted right down to the finish. Royal Nap lost ground but gradually became a contender. He might have won under stronger handling.

Cox Nominated All-American Jerk

over the manner in which "Mr. Harris was informed of his dismissal," but emphasized that "he was given the opportunity of resigning, if he wished to do so."

"That makes sense, doesn't it?" Harris said.

While Harris has no contract with the Phillies, he "has it in writing that he will be paid for the remainder of the season," he said.

"No, I do not intend to see Mr. Cox personally about this matter," Harris said. "I simply don't like people like him and want to stay away from them."

In New York, Cox said that Harris "obviously was looking into a mirror when he said that 'he is an all-America jerk.'"

Cox said that he could not prepare a statement on the Harris dismissal until yesterday because "I was traveling in the interests of the team. First I went from St. Louis to Chicago, then to Pittsburgh and not until 10 a. m. yesterday did I reach Philadelphia and have time to prepare a report."

$1,000,000 Golf Lesson For Ryder Cup Fans

Detroit, Aug. 2 (AP).—When Walter Hagen, left, and Craig Wood, right, get together on the links you hear and see plenty of golf. That is why fans here are looking forward to the Ryder Cup matches which will be played at the Plum Hollow Country Club this weekend.

"The Hair" again will captain the challengers while Wood is doing a return job as leader of the Ryder team. Last year Hagen's men lost.

A million dollar golf lesson will be one of the features of the matches this year. When the teams have finished play on the second day, the players will proceed to a big amphitheater erected on the course and demonstrate their favorite shots from a specially constructed tee to an enlarged green.

The matches and the show of shots are expected to raise $35,000 which will go to the Red Cross to purchase athletic equipment for the use of the boys abroad.

Court Upholds Merritt's Suit For Licensing

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 2.—State Supreme Court Justice Carroll Walter today refused to dismiss Jockey Bobby Merritt's suit against the State Racing Commission and the Jockey Club and ruled that unless their refusal to grant him a riding license "can be justified," Merritt is "entitled to a license as a matter of right."

The veteran 31-year-old jockey, a native of Newark, N. J., applied to the Jockey Club for a 1943 license on May 1, but received no answer for 15 days, indicating a refusal. Following the usual appeal procedure, he went before a joint session of the commission and Jockey Club stewards, and they upheld the refusal, without explaining why Merritt, a licensed jockey in this State since 1932 except for 1939 and '40 when he made no application, could not get his permit for this season.

As a result, Bobby brought suit for a review of the action and asked for a court order compelling issuance of a license. The commission and the Jockey Club asked the court to dismiss the suit, contending the court had no jurisdiction to review the findings.

The case is attracting considerable attention in racing, largely because other similar situations may hinge on it. One of these is the case of Eddie Arcaro, crack rider from Newport, Ky., and one of the greatest jockeys in the past 10 years. He also has been refused a license this year, without any explanation from the Jockey Club.

Southworth's Son Awarded Flying Cross

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 2 (AP).—Capt. Billy Southworth, 26-year-old ball player son of the St. Louis Cardinals' manager, today was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross upon completing a tour of operations as pilot of the Flying Fortress Winning Run.

Young Southworth, who gave up a promising career as a baseball player to enlist in the Air Force even before Pearl Harbor, previously had won the Air Medal with three Oakleaf Clusters. He now is assigned as operations officer of a combat unit.

The latest citation praised Southworth for "extraordinary achievements" while serving as pilot of the Fortress on bombing missions over enemy territory in continental Europe.

It added that in "displaying great courage and skill Captain Southworth has materially aided in the success of each of these missions and his actions are an inspiring example for his fellow fliers."

Toledo Takes Option On Baker of Browns

St. Louis, Aug. 2 (AP).—Floyd Baker, St. Louis Browns' reserve infielder, was optioned today to Toledo of the American Association, the Browns' office said.

Baker, in 49 trips to the plate this year, batted .163 for the Browns. He was with San Antonio of the Texas League last year.

A BLUEPRINT FOR BUILDING "BETTER MEN"

Pullman-Standard is building many products—vast quantities of armament—vehicles of transportation—and the greatest of these is "Men"!

IT IS A THRILLING THING to build good products. It is another and vastly more stirring experience to point to Men who have forged ahead, and say, "These are our finest handiwork!" For, let any one of this Company's workers demonstrate ability and ambition to better himself, there is opened to him the priceless "know-how" and experience of his immediate superior.

On that wholesome man-to-man basis is built Pullman-Standard's continuing training program for the molding of men. For twenty years the Company has sponsored an employe "suggestion" plan which pays well for suggestions adopted—another avenue through which employes can display initiative.

The Company's policy, wherever possible, is to promote from within. Classes are organized periodically for Leaders, Supervisors, Foremen, and others who can qualify. These classes are addressed, from time to time, by members of the Company's management who, in turn, attend them to listen and learn when they feel the need of a "refresher course."

Inevitable result of that plan for building better men is a deep clan spirit, and a loyalty to the Company that permeates through even the families of Pullman-Standard workers. Get ahead?—Why, the best place of all, they'll tell you, is right at the Plant. This system of training men for responsible positions enables this expanded management group to handle many times the load carried in 1940!

From the titanic laboratory of America's war production have emerged amazing discoveries and developments—and of them all the greatest is the very spirit of the men who achieved them! Men in high places of authority down to trainees, who have discovered what a thrill it is to find "it can be done—or—done better." Men intolerant of methods that have crystallized into rigid custom. Men aflame with zeal for the limitless possibilities of every job. Men whose passion for Freedom and for every man's right to win a high place by his own intelligent effort has flame-tempered them to new and inspiring capacity for doing!

TO THE SERVICE OF TRANSPORTATION in the stirring days to come, Pullman-Standard will bring many new and better methods, better techniques—and better men! Men who have been tested and proved in the laboratory of war production! Builders of railroad cars who have become builders of ships, tanks, aircraft assemblies, howitzer and rifle carriages, anti-aircraft gun weldments, trench mortars, shells and bombs! Men unafraid of the unknown and its problems, because they have already tackled them—and mastered them!

ARMY E NAVY

Here are some striking examples of men with restless, inquiring minds.

Men not content with old ways—old methods. Men with vision who have risen to places of high responsibility in the Company. They are typical of several thousands who form the group whose function it is to lead, plan and direct.

* He came to us as a helper. Through initiative and study he advanced rapidly. Superiors noted his gift for management, for teaching and getting the best out of men. With training and encouragement he rose steadily. Today, still fired with ambition, he is Superintendent of a division employing many thousands of men.

* He came to the Company in 1924 as a carbuilder. Transferred to layout work, he took his first job home at night, made paper cut-outs for templates on the kitchen floor. His initiative was recognized and encouraged...he was trained. Today he is General Foreman of a most important division. Not a "driver," but a "teacher" and a "leader" of thousands of men.

* Within 6 months of joining the Company, he was offered more work and greater responsibility—he jumped at the chance and has been "jumping" ever since. Management was impressed by his intense curiosity and capacity for absorption in his job. He contributed ideas of vital importance to carbuilding—his promotion has been phenomenal. Today he heads a planning department which influences the products made by more than 20,000 men.

* In one plant the position of departmental foreman became vacant. It required particular skill. Management through its system of continual search among employes for potential supervisors selected a helper in another department. By taking advantage of different courses offered him by the Company, in the short space of 3 years he became a valued and outstanding Departmental Foreman.

* In 1929 a plant manager needed a stenographer. The new young man's resourcefulness and keen application to the job was noted. His promotion to department head was rapid. He was given special training and today is Assistant to the Plant Manager.

 These are true case histories chosen at random from the personnel records of Pullman-Standard plants. Individual names have been purposely omitted in fairness to the thousands of other workers who by their own perseverance and study have also risen to important positions in the company.*

President's Deferment Committee Is Tough

The President's deferment committee is really getting tough. Justice Department—not counting FBI asked for the deferment of 240 "key" employes. The committee approved only 40. Many legal jobs were knocked from the deferred class by the committee . . . Leo Crowley has asked the Budget Bureau to make a study of his newly acquired Office of Economic Warfare and to tell him how the RFC foreign purchases can be merged with it. Meantime, Crowley is dickering with two men, both outside Government, to replace Milo Perkins at OEW. . . . Jesse Tapp, who recently resigned as deputy food czar, has been made president of a large Louisville tobacco company at several times his Government salary.

"Angel and Gentle, Water Department, Washington, D. C.," was the address on a letter received at District Water Department recently. The writer asked about allotment checks that were overdue. He had a son in the Army. A couple of sluths went to work and they figured out the letter should have been addressed to: Adjutant General's office, War Department." The investigation proved correct and AGO is rushing the checks. . . . Farm Security has been given another shot in the arm which will save jobs of a few of its employes. It'll handle Secretary Wickard's 15-million-dollar flood loan fund. . . . The National Press Club had Mussolini's number as early as 1928. Mussolini applied for membership in the club but he was greeted by a deluge of blackballs.

Can your office top this: On August 20, the last male employe in the files section o. the U. S. Conciliation Service will be inducted into the Army, making a total of 100 per cent. Thirteen men h ve gone into the service and their chief, James E. Gordon, is proud of the record they've been making. Four have won commissions the hard way, five are officer candidates, one a technical sergeant, and three are first class privates. They are Capt. John McGrath, First Lieut. Jackson Jones, Ensign Russell Hackley, Lieut. Pat O'Riggen, Peter Boccabello and William Blake, flying Navy cadets; George Cates, Navy V-12; Robert Mann, officer candidate; Howard Stokes, Army flying cadet; Technical Sergt. Fred Galante, and Pvts. Marcus Kitchelt, Edward Pascal and Thomas Robertson.

Bashore Moves Up

INTERIOR CHANGES: Harry Basore moves up to director of the Reclamation Bureau and his No. 1 assistant is William Warne, who has been director of information. Bob Horton moves in as director of information. . . . Almost unnoticed, Civil Aaronautics has grown into a vast organization and it's doing one of the most important war jobs of the peacetime agencies. Congress gave CAA 58 million dollars for this fiscal year, but it has been given several hundred projects by War, Navy and other agencies which has increased its 1944 budget to 410 million dollars. It now has 10,000 employes. CAA is one agency that'll continue to grow when peace comes. . . . The Civil Service Commission has established a supervision improvement section.

Both Army and Navy have issued orders liberalizing annual leave for their civilian employes. The orders are much the same. War employes will get 12-day vacations, including travel time, but Navy employes can get 12-day vacations plus additional travel time if the supervisors can arrange it. War employes formerly got 6-day vacation plus travel time. Supervisors in both departments were told to approve short periods of leave every two or three weeks so long as it doesn't interfere with the running of the war. . . . Chauncey Tramatoes, San Francisco attorney, has been appointed special assistant to Postmaster General Walker.

Before he left to join Lend-Lease, Dexter Zeezer, deputy OPA administrator, told his employes that he knew they'd continue to plug ahead despite the fact that their immediate reward would be the "pillorying of you as long-hairs, stooges for special interests, or red tape spinners." He told them they could take comfort in the fact that they have company in other countries on the receiving end of the almost "cosmic cussing." He quoted a piece in the London Economist which said in part: "The civil servant in wartime occupies an important and peculiar position. Besides running the war, he is the public scapegoat. All the vexation of wartime toil and constraint is vented against his works or lack of works. He cannot answer back, either to the charge that, autocratically, he takes too much upon himself or to the accusation that, frightened at the consequences, he will not take any responsibility at all."

Nice Going

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 2 (A.P.).—When a 25-pound concrete cornice toppled yesterday from an apartment building and plummeted through the hood of an automobile below, the machine's occupant established some sort of a speed record. Witnesses said the driver jumped from the car, dashed across the street and dived head first through the screen door of a restaurant.

Firemen Yell 'Fire!'

Richmond, Va.—A fire came rolling up to fire department headquarters today. But they don't keep any apparatus for quelling blazes at headquarters, so a battalion chief telephoned to Engine Company No. 3 a block away. A fire engine raced up and quenched the fire—in the back end of a trolley car where a passenger had flipped a cigarette.

Looks Like Some Cots Are Needed

These pictures, taken at Union Station at 2:30 a. m. yesterday, indicated the urgent need for rest and recreational facilities for service men. Steps are now being taken to correct these conditions. (Story on Page 1.)

Fr. Fenlon Rites In Baltimore to Be Held Thursday

Special Dispatch to The Post

Holland, Mich., Aug. 2.—Church dignitaries and many clergymen trained under him today paid respects to the Rev. Dr. John F. Fenlon, who died here Saturday after a heart attack. He was 70.

Services for the well-known Catholic priest and educator were held in the St. Francis de Sales Church here. Final rites will be held in the Baltimore Cathedral Thursday at 10:30 a. m. Archbishop Michael J. Curley will pontificate and the Rev. James M. Gillis, C. S. P., editor of the Catholic World, will preach the sermon. Numerous members of the Catholic hierarchy are expected to attend.

At the time of his death, Father Fenlon was United States provincial of the Society of St. Sulpice and president of St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore.

In 1903, Father Fenlon went to Washington as rector of the Sulpician House of Studies, remaining until he was appointed rector of Caldwell Hall of the Catholic University of America. He held this position until 1924 when he accepted the post of president of the Sulpician Seminary in Washington. In 1925 he assumed the positions which he held until his death.

During the first World War he was secretary of the National Catholic War Council and later secretary to the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Food Handlers' Union Orders Tests for Venereal Disease

Immediate physical examination of all persons handling food in the District restaurants, hotels, night clubs and cafes was ordered yesterday by Leighton Williams, business agent of the powerful Cooks, Pastry Cooks and Kitchen Employes Union, following disclosure by The Post that an estimated 3500 venereals are employed in District public eating places.

A three-point program to sharply reduce the number of persons with venereal disease so employed was recommended by Williams.

1. Enlistment of all owners and managers of eating places to arrange physical examinations of their employes immediately.
2. Reporting of venereal findings to the Bureau of Venereal Diseases, headed by Dr. F. G. Gillick.
3. Cooperation, on an educational and treatment basis, by the bureau to remedy the situation.

Draft Board Shocked

Yesterday's action was taken by Williams after James D. Hayes, chairman of Selective Service Board 9, declared as "shocking" the records of his office which disclosed that 35 per cent of persons rejected for military service and placed in draft status 4-F were now employed as food handlers.

Any food handler found to be infected will be told to report for treatment, if he or she has not already done so, Williams said. Dr. Gillick said such persons will receive free treatment, if unable to afford private attention.

10,000 Cases Here

The number of venereal disease cases in the District, according to health records, is approximately 10,000, and 3500 of these persons are handling food, Chairman Hayes' figures show.

Health authorities pointed out that increasing numbers of Negroes are entering employ of eating places. Incidence of venereal disease among them is nearly 30 per cent compared to between 1 and 2 per cent for whites, said Dr. James C. Cummings, director of the Health Department's Bureau of Preventable Diseases.

No one need fear frank admission of disease, Williams said, for no discharges were contemplated in light of health authorities' declaration that venereal danger is "negligible" from food handlers so infected.

Shortage Denied, But Beer's Where You Can Find It

The local beer situation became more confused last night as first effects of the Army's demands that 15 per cent of national output be devoted to 33.2 brew were felt here. Beer seemed to be where you could find it.

Local brewers and brewers' agents, while denying an actual shortage, admitted beer producion is now from 22 per cent to 40 per cent below normal.

Some places said they were on a "day to day" basis, and that a shortage is here. In other spots, however, chiefly in the more popular restaurants, the beverage seemed plentiful.

Md. Utilities Rates Cut by Negotiation

Ex-People's Counsel Tells How Public Has Been Saved Thousands of Dollars

By Roger Young
Post Staff Writer

Maryland taxpayers are saved thousands of dollars annually by the ability of the People's Counsel to get utilities rate reductions through negotiation rather than through the cumbersome procedure of public hearings, inquiry of the Maryland Public Service Commission revealed last night.

This was pointed out as being in direct contrast to the situation in the District of Columbia, where even the most trivial question of utilities regulation must be threshed out in public hearing.

Many requests for rate raises in Maryland are dropped without ever engaging the official attention of the commission through the assurance of the People's Counsel that vigorous opposition in behalf of the consumer would be forthcoming, according to Joseph Sherbow, outstanding former People's Counsel and now general counsel to the commission.

$1,000,000 Cut Won

Perhaps the most impressive of these victories for the consumer was won by Sherbow in 1939, when he obtained a $1,000,000 rate reduction for the customers of the Consolidated Gas & Electric Co. of Baltimore. This was after the chairman of the Public Service Commission had said: "Even if a hearing should be held, it would not result in any decrease of rates within the lawful limits, or which would be sustained by the courts."

This rate reduction which the People's Counsel had won singlehanded had been urgently petitioned for considerable time—with no success—by various civic organizations that correspond to the citizens associations in Washington, upon which the vacancy of the People's Counsel position imposes the burden of representing the consumer's cause before the PUC.

Although it has been argued by some persons in defense of the President's refusal to fill the People's Counsel position in Washington that the PUC itself or the corporation counsel should be sufficient protector of the people's interests, Sherbow was emphatic that the position was indispensable.

Maryland Tradition

"It may be true that few other States have this position specified by law," Sherbow said. "Nevertheless it is a tradition in Maryland, and has been retained for so many years because it is a tradition of accomplishment."

Among the accomplishments of the People's Counsel in Maryland during the last few years have been the revaluation of the Baltimore-Claiborne Ferry which resulted in the State purchase of the utility, the reduction of Baltimore County telephone rates, and substantial savings in the rates of most of the other of Maryland's 125 utility companies.

80 Charwomen Get $4 to $5 Pay Deductions

Eighty charwomen at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing yesterday received their first paychecks with $4 and $5 deducted as partial reimbursement on money overpaid them through an official error.

The women, who had received 78 cents an hour instead of 65 for almost a year, probably will have no further deductions made, however, a United Federal Workers of America spokesman predicted, for the Treasury Department will act within the next few weeks on a request to cease taking out payments until Congress reconvenes and has an opportunity to consider enactment of a relief fund.

Meanwhile donations to the Charwomen's Club, proposed by a War Production Board employe, continued to arrive at The Post to make up the deficit. All such funds will be held pending official action, and will be returned to senders if they are not needed for the purpose for which they were intended.

For that reason donors are urged to enclose complete addresses, although names will be kept anonymous if desired.

Juanita Carter Commended For Sparkling Song Recital

By Ray C. B. Brown

Phillips Memorial Gallery presents Juanita Carter in a song recital on Monday night. Accompanist L. Theodore Schaefer. Program of songs by Theodore Ward Chanler, Joseph Marx, Darius Milhaud, Johann Sebastian Bach and Thomas Morley.

Disproving the adage that you can't get something for nothing, Phillips Memorial Gallery has been presenting free recitals on Sunday afternoons for some time past, and the public has shown proper appreciation of these gratuities. Into that series was interpolated last evening Juanita Carter in a special song recital that was quite out of the ordinary. In fact, it was a recital for which the young soprano must be whole-heartedly commended.

BROWN

Those whose curiosity about musical literature can never be slakened found this occasion thoroughly enjoyable, for Miss Carter roamed whither her fancy dictated—among contemporary composers and back to Bach and Morley. She began with Theodore Ward Chanler's settings of four poems from Walter de la Mare's "Peacock Pie," An American cycle of whimsical songs designed not for beauty but for entertainment.

The next group contained three lieder by the contemporary Austrian composer, Joseph Marx: "Forest Happiness," "The Bashful Swain" and "Yesterday He Brought Me Roses." Miss Carter then introduced Darius Milhaud's "Catalogue des Fluers," which was composed in 1921 for voice and chamber orchestra. The words are taken from Lucien Daudet's parody of a florist's catalogue setting forth the virtues of various bulbs and seeds, and the music is correspondingly satirical.

From the tomes of Bach's wors Miss Carter selected the realtively unknown aria, "Sie Seele ruh't in Jesu Handen." This was followed by three numbers from Thomas Morley's "First Book of Airs or Little Short Songs to sing and play to the Lute with Bass Viol." These delightful concerts, so pithy and so harmonically deft, were "Thyrsis and Milla," "She Straight Her Light Green Silken Coats" and "Love Winged My Hopes."

In the first of her encores, Miss Carter kept on her individual way with a new American song, "Yearning," by Kenneth Christie; in the second, she made her one concession to usage by singing Amy Beach's "Ah, Love, But a Day."

Victory Sidelights

Coast Guard's 153d Birthday Observance Begins With Sing

The United States Coast Guard began a week-long celebration of its 153d anniversary as part of the Nation's protective forces last night at a community sing program in Sylvan Theater, with the Baltimore Coast Guard Band featured.

Wartime calls to duty under U. S. Navy direction prevented more elaborate celebration of the Coast Guard's long career.

Sixth largest of world fleets, the Coast Guard in peacetime pursuing smugglers and customs violators under the Treasury Department, today is actively engaged in naval operations on all oceans. It played an important and prominent part in the attack on Guadalcanal.

Naylor Gardens Group

Naylor Gardens warworkers, 750 families of them, determined to have a day nursery, adequate recreational facilities and an OCD organization, last night banded themselves in a Naylor Garden Improvement Association, with Joseph Brown, Department of Justice employe, chairman.

Provisions for these were left out of the plans of the 5-million-dollar project sponsored by the Defense Homes Corporation, according to Harold Buckles, Gardens leader.

The newly-formed association will seek help of authorities in attaining their objectives, Buckles said. Naylor Gardens is located in Southeast Washington, starting in the 2800 block of Naylor Road, and is roughly bounded by Naylor Road, Alabama Avenue and Good Hope Road.

P.-C. A. Adds Planes

Effective since Sunday, these flights give Washington eight P.-C. A. trips a day to industrial sections in the West and four trips a day to Norfolk.

Labor Dearth Here Critical, USES Says

Restaurants, Hotels Must Have Help; Merchant Marine Posts Also Open

By Bert Kemmerer
Post Staff Writer

Manpower shortages in all of Washington's industries have reached the critical stage, it was stated last night by Kathryn N. Fox, in charge of labor recruiting for the United States Employment Service here.

"We have a definite shortage of 1272 workers in essential activities recorded, "Miss Fox said, "and in some activities such as the merchant marine, fruit and vegetable canning, harvesting and seasonal work we can place anyone who applies."

Stenographers lead the list of office workers wanted, it was revealed. There are calls for 700 office workers needed at once, 432 stenographers, 193 typists and 80 audit clerks, the latter nearly all required by hotel firms.

330 Hotel, Cafe Jobs

In addition to audit clerks, there are 330 hotel and restaurant openings to be filled as quickly as possible. As an illustration of the drastic shortage of workers "the Statler," Miss Fox said, "was forced to operate only two elevators during the morning yesterday."

Some of the places now open are highly technical and pay excellent salaries. There is an opening for a dietician, a dental technician, radio, industrial, plant and mechanical engineers.

Although there is an admitted shortage of 700 workers in all classes of laundry employes in the District of Columbia, only 64 workers were called for yesterday in orders placed.

Five radio engineers are urgently needed as well a 15 technicians, the record showed.

Carpenters, Cooks Needed

There are also unfilled orders for 305 institutional attendants, 124 carpenters, and 10 cooks, not including merchant marine cooks. Nineteen general painters are wanted, eight automobile painters and eight automotive machinists.

In addition to those listed the United States Merchant Marine and the Capital Transit Co. maintain recruiting bureaus at Employment center.

With the harvest period in the offing and an estimate made recently by K. Vernon Banta, USES area director, of 50,000 workers needed to take care of this year's yield in tomatoes, peaches and apples, from now until November 1, Miss Fox said every method possible to secure workers would have to be applied.

3-Point Plan Offered Here To Save Ice

A three-point program to conserve Washington's present supply of ice was suggested yesterday by representatives of the ice, hotel and restaurant industries who met with Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, to discuss the critical lack of the commodity.

The meeting developed recommendations that:

First: In the present crisis, first consideration should be given to food preservation both in the home and the commercial industries and the hospital needs should be met by all means.

Second: A considerable saving could be made if the public would not insist on using ice water, especially if it is already cooled, and that no unnecessary ice should be used by anyone.

Third: Stop waste. Ice should not be allowed to stand around for an unnecessary amount of time and it should be properly stored and protected from sun and heated kitchens.

Among the things brought out by the meeting was that the demands for ice today were 40 per cent above the District's ability to produce it, and that production of ice is now at its maximum here.

The consensus of those attending the meeting was that in no previous years has it been possible to produce enough ice in the summer time to supply the demand. "It has always been necessary to store ice in the winter in order to build up a reserve for the top season in ice consumption and that Washington's ice manufacturers stored about 42,000 tons last winter, more than ever before. This reserve is almost exhausted," the report said.

It also pointed out that large amounts of ice are being used by the Army and Navy, approximately 100 to 150 tons a day, or about 10 to 12 per cent of the entire daily production in the city. It further stated that every possible chance of stepping up production had been utilized.

The meeting concurred in the statement that 30 per cent of the present ice supply was being wasted and that the industry's attempt to supplement the supply from outside sources had not been able to meet demands.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man of High Principle and Woman of Superior Character, Each Already Married, Fall in Love At Sight; Man Asks Solution of Tragic Dilemma

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Two years ago, my wife and I met, socially, a couple from the Middle West. They were financially independent, cultured and, to all appearances, deeply devoted to each other. The man, whom I shall call John, could and did give his wife, Ellen, all that money could buy. She was the belle of her town before her marriage; and beyond any doubt, in the opinion of all who know her, is the most beautiful, charming, unspoiled person imaginable. Her husband, after one gets to know him, is arrogant and self-centered (by virtue of a doting, wealthy mother); and regards Ellen as a show piece for his clothes, cars and social functions. In his way, no doubt he loves her, so long as she is subservient to his will and whim.

I am 35. Ellen is 31. Both of us are old enough to know the consequences of two married people falling in love. But we did, as inevitably as the rising of the sun. To say that we fought against it would be an understatement. When we met, neither of us acknowledged the introduction, so great was the magnetism of our hands meeting. Miss Haworth, I am not given to writing. I work with my hands; and this is a new experience for me,—trying to put into words the feeling that is in my heart. If it seems overly-sentimental, I am sorry; but the facts are there. During the next two years, Ellen and I met again several times, at social functions; and always the same feeling would come to me,—that I had met a kindred soul. I avoided any word or look that might convey my feeling. In fact, my wife several times asked me to be more gracious to Ellen, lest she think me uncivil.

At the outbreak of the war, John enlisted as an officer; and about this time, a casual meeting between Ellen and myself, while I was in her section of town, led us to have dinner and discuss social matters. It was she who, after dinner and a long silence, asked me what we were to do. I was not surprised that she, too, had known what had happened without our wanting it or aiding it. I have been married since I was 18; half my life. I am the father of two lovely children and master of a beautiful home, which hard labor, self-sacrifice and the determination to lift myself by my own bootstraps has built. Yet this love was greater than any emotion I had ever known. I loved my wife as devotedly as a man can; never by one word mistreating her. I had mixed socially with hundreds of women, with never a thought of any illicit love in my mind. And I shall never regard my love for Ellen as illicit or sordid.

We consummated a pure love. No one as proud of honor and decency as we two are could be vulgar. Yet we would be so judged by the world, if the world knew; and I would not hesitate to pass the same judgment upon someone else. Does everyone in this predicament imagine that he is the exception, his the only true love, his the right to cast aside conventions and express his love as we did? Perhaps; I don't know. Afterwards, there was on my part no shame, no remorse, no fear of detection;—just the same inexpressible love intensified a thousand times. I am not love starved. I have had a normal love life with my wife. And Ellen is not a neglected wife. She sees her husband more often nowadays than when he was in business.

Intends to Abide By Our Decision

Since that time, we have had over a year in which to decide the future. In that year, we have met secretly four times only;—and have desisted from lovemaking (although opportunity and desire were present); trying to find the solution of the dilemma. Surely there must be another answer than the obvious one of not seeing each other. We tried that for 10 months and it didn't succeed; although we both sought the proverbial panacea of work,—of which there is plenty in wartime to divert one's mind into other channels than thoughts of love. Ellen became ill and had to recuperate in her home in the Middle West; while my work amassed a pile of war bonds and took off 35 pounds from a rawboned 185.

I can look at the case impersonally, I believe; but no solution occurs to me except breaking up my home, asking my wife for a divorce; having Ellen ask her husband for freedom, waiting the three years required by law, etc.;—yet I know that is wrong. Can our love survive that? I know mine can. I have waited for years to achieve certain other objectives. In the life left to me, I desire nothing else but Ellen. I have never wanted anything so much. And speaking for Ellen, she possesses infinitely more character and courage than most women . . . My wife is an ordinary woman, a good housekeeper and mother; and she loves me dearly and tells me so, often; and that she appreciates a man like me. Even this causes no twinge of conscience. Yet, how can I break the heart of a good woman like her, and desert my two children? But when I think of this, I am ready any time to give up everyone and everything for Ellen, as she would for me.

Inasmuch as Ellen has already decided to abide by my decision, and I am unable to decide for myself, I am going to abide by yours. Your knowledge of life must have met a parallel somewhere,—not just the proverbial triangle or quadrangle; but two people in love mentally, physically and spiritually; and I say that in spite of our violation of the moral code, for it is true. I never would have written this if I did not think there is an out for us somewhere. I intend to abide by your decision; and if it is too harsh, there is always a final answer to our problem, albeit a trifle sooner than intended by God. Very sincerly yours. B. G.

Mutual True Love Improves Morale

DEAR B. G.: If your love for Ellen, and hers for you, is the divine afflatus,—the mutual recognition of an "out-of-this-world" affinity of spirits,—which you jointly accept it as being, you can and you will maintain the social separateness to which you were already bound by hallowed commitments at the time you first met each other. I say that confidently for the following reason: The test of the validity of your conviction concerning the elevated nature of your feeling, the measure of its purity and worth, will be found (and the answer proved) in the effects of that love upon your respective characters; and in the performance it inspires, or enables, or compels, you to give,—in consequence of having absolutely acknowledged each other as kindred souls whose compatibility is flawless.

In my opinion, there are two aspects of your impressively told story which put this love on trial as being less sublime (and I use the term respectfully) than you think. The one aspect is your concluding reference to suicide,—or a suicide pact. If you could for more than an instant seriously entertain that possibility; if it is an "out" you would consider and attempt to "sell" Ellen, as an escape from the disciplines of reason and conscience,—you are at heart more of a fool and a coward than a man. And you are incapable of experiencing and supporting a truly noble passion, which by its very nature invariably besets the soul with alternating extremes (and tidal waves) of desolation and exaltation. And the net value or ultimate good or spiritual gain of which has to do, always, I might interpolate, with "education of the heart," in the sense of "giving understanding" of life beyond that possessed by the conventionally-stultified personality.

The other aspect of your story which evokes distrust of the sublimity of your shared emotion is your adherence to the mentally hidebound theory—the basis of your conflict: a theory from which this love, significantly (as it seems to me), has failed to free you,—the theory that ineffable love, a love primarily of mind and spirit, must necessarily be reduced to the bondages and familiar usages of conjugal daily living, if it is to work as a beneficent leaven in the lives and minds and spirits of the two who love with a sense of predestined affinity. Nothing could be less true of true love than that theory, of course. And the first lesson that true love would have to teach, in circumstances such as these which beset you and Ellen, is that there is no sense of separation between the souls of those who completely and purely love each other.

Basis of Failure To Chart a Course

That you and Ellen are greatly in love, I have no doubt. But your tardy discovery of each other, with its resultant experience of divided loyalties and poignant frustration, is by no means without parallel. Your conviction of tragedy stems from the fact that you are, as individuals and as a pair, so peculiarly ill-equipped to cope with the situation your unbidden love has propounded. Your love is essentially earthy, lighted with some sensitivity of mind and spirit, which accounts for its delicately poetic quality, and which also deters you from letting your earthier impulses dominate your relationship. Were you somewhat less spiritually "alive" than you are, you would already have done what many couples in like dilemma have done in the past,—which is to say, you would have recklessly and selfishly sacrificed everyone who stood in the way of your claiming each other by legal process, "to have and to hold."

On the other hand, were you several degrees more advanced, spiritually, again you would have been promptly delivered from the throes of indecision. You would have exorcised temptation with one sharp surgical stroke of your united will,—by renouncing in short order (regretfully, perhaps but no less positively), the tantalizing possibility of a "beautiful life" together, as being out of the question between persons of lofty principle, when the possibility could only be achieved at ruthless disregard of the prior rights of other trustful individuals directly concerned. And you would have found, in that positive decision, a turning point for the better in the tangled relationship,—a point at which any incipient sense of frustration would have been lastingly dissolved, by virtue of the fact that you had freely elected and sympathetically concurred in a self evidently "right" course of action; and a point from which you could go forward together in perfect spiritual accord, though by separate social paths, to steadfastly support your pre-existing obligations of honor: this being the highest tribute within your collective power to pay to the transcendent character of your love, in the circumstances.

And this is the course I advise you to take, even yet,—as the only upward way out of your numbing bewilderment of mind and spirit. You cannot take the alternative course, of divorcing your respective mates, without regressing to a lower order of personality than you are; and to take that downward step would be automatically to do violence to the intangible, redeeming, poetic best in your feeling for, and appeal to, each other,—so that, in essence, the mutilating sacrifice would have been made in vain. The supernal quality of your love would have evaporated as you moved thus to claim it. The psychologists tell us, and experience proves, that emotion follows action; which is to say, that as we "do," we "become;"—so, though you may feel scarcely strong enough to embrace this course today, if you calmly commit yourself to it and keep it faithfully, you will experience, in time, increasing strength to hold it, almost effortlessly; and, moreover, the gathering spiritual and social rewards of doing so. It may be, indeed, that this is the path you are predestined to follow, if you are to be cleanly blest, in some future year, with the rightly-ordered fulfillment of your heart's desire. M. H.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The following letter is typical of many I receive which provide me with so little information about the child involved that I am well nigh helpless to be of any aid.

Mrs. J. L. C. is extremely worried about the low weight of her daughter. "She weighed 5½ pound at birth and now at 10 months only weighs 16½ pounds.

"She simply will not eat. Whenever she does eat anything she usually throws it up. She is a strong child, very active and happy. I am certain there is nothing wrong with her, as far as her health is concerned, nevertheless I worry over her non-eating. She is a bottle baby and drinks all of the milk I give her. I shall be grateful for any suggestions."

What I am compelled to wonder is what foods you give her, when you give them, in what quantities, etc.? Without that information I have no real idea what could be wrong.

It is true many a child gets all the milk he or she wants to drink, refuses other foods, being satisfied to remain a baby indefinitely and drink milk by bottle. The problem may not better itself until hunger is stimulated by fewer feedings, by less milk per day.

The weight is fair, considering the low birth weight but would no doubt have been much better had the child been introduced to solid foods early in life. By this time there would have been a very generous program of food, plus milk.

The vomiting may be related to some physical condition which promotes vomiting, or to the way you are feeding the baby. Solid foods, in such case, had better be given before the bottle is offered, followed by the milk. You can be satisfied with one tablespoon of the solid food, first, then follow with the bottle.

Don't go on allaying your anxiety with that old bromide, "He gets plenty of milk so I needn't worry," for a child of this age fed exclusively on milk is a poorly nourished child. An all-milk fed child can become so anemic as to diminish appetite and thus prevent the child wanting more and different foods.

I would disregard the vomiting and concentrate on the proper diet. Be sure the baby gets no more than four bottles of milk daily, three might be better. Vitamin D and orange juice should be an unalterable part of the daily program. You could very well try diluting the milk somewhat, so the baby's appetite for the next meal would be enhanced and solid foods be acceptable.

Any baby not fed too often is certain to be hungry and hunger is the one sauce which makes all foods appealing.

Our leaflet, "Feeding From Nine to Twelve Months," suggests the usual feeding program after weaning. It may be had by sending a 3-cent, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Please Relieve Bottle Shortage

Soft drink bottlers urge, beg and plead with you to get those "slacker" bottles out of hiding. They ask you to do this for your own good as well as for your neighbors, servicemen and all lovers of soft drinks, and here's why.

There's a bottle shortage. Glass container manufacturers are working 24 hours a day in order to produce containers for many foods which were previously canned, so bottlers' orders cannot always be filled. Soft drink bottles, however, are designed for reuse many times, and if they are kept in circulation at all times there will be enough of these cool, refreshing beverages to go around.

Why not take inventory of your pantry, basement and garage today and see just how many "slackers" you can find? You may be amazed at the number you have lying around taking up space. Return them to your dealer at once so that he in turn, can get them back to the bottler to be sterilized and refilled with tasty beverages.

The refunded bottle deposits may amount to almost what you need to finish your war savings stamp book.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Fresh fruit served with Almond Jam Bars such as pictured here make a dessert which will be a satisfying final flourish for a summer meal. See today's menu which suggests Fillets of Sole, Amandine and Almond Jam Bars served with fresh fruit

Fresh fruit should be used now that the fruit season is getting into full swing. We value fruits especially for their vitamin and mineral content. But fruits also furnish us with protective and regulatory substances. Money spent in purchasing a regular fresh fruit supply is economical health insurance.

Martha Ellyn

Handle fruit gently so as not to bruise it. Bruising causes loss of Vitamin C. Spread out berries and soft fruits on trays and place in refrigerator if necessary to keep overnight. Flavor of many fruits is better however, if not too cold when served. Don't refrigerate bananas.

Cook fresh fruits quickly, as short a time as possible, stirring as little as possible. To avoid loss of Vitamin C, don't sieve fruit while hot; don't sieve at all if it can be avoided. Keep frozen fruits frozen until time to cook or thaw for serving uncooked. If they are to be cooked, put on to heat while still frozen.

Uncooked fruit not only makes a delicious dessert but also one easy to prepare. And the attractive berries sets that are available in the stores inspire you to serve fresh fruit just so you can have attractive dessert service. Or perhaps you have one of the old fruit or berries sets that belonged to your grandmother or Aunt Susie.

With fresh fruit and cookies to bring a happy ending to a meal, let's plan a menu using these foods. Here's a suggestion:

Dinner Menu

Jellied Consomme
Fillets of Sole, Amandine
Escalloped Tomatoes
Cabbage-Carrot Salad
Enriched Bread, Butter
Fresh Fruit, Almond Jam Bars
Iced Beverage

You can find plenty of fresh fillets or quick-frozen ones to make up the pivotal meal on the above menu. Following are the recipes for the Fillets of Sole, Amandine and Almond Jam Bars.

FILLETS OF SOLE, AMANDINE

Dip fillets in salted flour. Saute in butter or margarine, until delicately browned. Season liquid remaining in pan with 2 tablespoons lemon juice and pour over fish. Sprinkle with finely chopped parsley and sauted, sliced almonds. Two pounds will serve 6 persons.

ALMOND JAM BARS

Cream ½ cup shortening and ½ teaspoon almond extract together. Add ½ cup corn sirup gradually, mixing well. Sift 1½ cups sifted enriched flour with 1 teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon cinnamon and ¼ teaspoon cloves. Add the flour mixture to shortening and mix until crumbly. Beat 1 egg and add. Mix until well blended. Spread half the dough in bottom of greased 7x12 inch pan. Spread dough with jam. Cover with remaining dough. Bake in moderately hot oven, 400 degrees, for 25 to 30 minutes. Yield: 28 bars 1x2½ inches.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

"Implementation of the second freedom—Freedom of Religion—will give the world a rich cultural pluralism which will produce a high respect for the common traditions of mankind," declared Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, who addressed the Woman's National Democratic Club's luncheon meeting yesterday. The youthful educator said:

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"The allegiance of the soul and the convictions of the heart are realities which may be taken into account in the dreams of the new free world, because what men believe determines what they do."

Analyzing the religious structure of the continents, Dr. Douglass pointed out that Christians in the United States number only 41 per cent of the population, and of that number only about 20 per cent are paying church members; non-Christiains in the world outnumber Christians two to one. Catholics outnumber Protestants in South America seven to one; non-Christians outnumber Christians in Asia 30 to 1 and, in Africa 17 to 1.

"Society in the free world must give juridical guarantees to the freedom of worship," he asserted. "These include individual autonomy in the choice of a creed; autonomy of the religious society in the pursuit of its collective activities; legal equality of the different confessions before the state."

Remarking that he was glad all the world wasn't Methodist, Baptist or Catholic, he stressed the fact that if all were of one creed too much intolerance and corruptness would creep in. Whereas, now each sect can show up the faults of the others and act as a sort of spiritual check.

Mutual respect for religious beliefs will prevent intolerance from being implemented by active persecution, said Doctor Douglass, warning that the new world cannot accept the paraphrases of Macaulay:

"I am right. You are wrong. When you are stronger you ought to tolerate me, for it is your duty to tolerate truth; but when I am the stronger I shall persecute you, for it is my duty to presecute you."

"There are large areas of common ground on which the second freedom may take root," explained Doctor Douglass.

Mrs. Hale T. Shenefield, vice president, presided, and Mrs. Norman Littell, program chairman, introduced the speaker. Guests at the head table included Mrs. Emil Hurja, Dr. Ruth Gruber, Mrs. C. D. Bradsham, Mrs. Claude Orchard, Dr. Cyril W. Wollock, Mrs. St. George Sioussant, Miss Clara Owen and B. P. Pardy.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Foreign Affairs Expert

(Following is an interview on international affairs with Mrs. Sylvanus Straddle, noted political leader, and only woman ever to get as far as the outer vestibule of a smoke-filled hotel room at a national party convention.)

"Mrs. Straddle, what do you think of the Italian situation?"

"I really wouldn't want to say—at this time. You see I have only read the press reports. I have received no official communications on the subject, as yet."

"What is your stand on the De Gaulle-Giraud controversy?"

"We-ell I haven't any first-hand information on that either. But I am inclined to think that both General de Gaulle and General Giraud are splendid gentlemen."

"Do you feel that the war in the Pacific is receiving enough support?"

"I—I couldn't say—at this time, on the basis of the information I possess. But I do think General MacArthur is a very splendid man."

"What do you think should be done with Germany and Japan when they are defeated?"

"I think—no what I mean to say is that I havn't given sufficient study to the question to render judgment. You see I've been so very busy with my civic and political work."

"Do you favor a long armistice?"

"Yes—and no. That, of course, would depend. It's all very involved."

Mrs. Straddle, now as to world peace——"

"Beg pardon, but I wouldn't want to discuss that—at this time. It's much too early!"

"You think we should wait until the end of the war?"

"Yes—in a way. However, don't quote me on that."

"Do you favor any kind of a world organization?"

"Well that is a matter to which I haven't given much study as yet. You see I've been so busy with my party organization duties."

"What do you think of the effort to have the Senate commit itself on postwar policy?"

"That again is something I've only read about in the press. I have no official reports on the matter."

"Do you think the United States should collaborate with England, Russia and China to maintain peace?"

"I haven't had a chance to think about that either. You see I have been so busy with my myriad duties——"

"What stand do you think your party will take on postwar foreign policy, Mrs. Straddle?"

"Well, of course, I never make prophecies. But you may quote me as saying that I feel sure it will take a sound, constructive stand."

"What kind of a foreign policy do you think this country should have?"

"It should have a sound foreign policy."

"How do you think women generally feel about postwar peace plans?"

"I am strongly of the opinion women can be depended upon to take a strong stand for the right."

"Would you say that women are less realistic about peace than men?"

"Yes and again no. Women are idealists—but they are also realists."

"Mrs. Straddle, are you in favor of world peace?"

"I shall issue a statement upon that a little later."

"Would you be willing to say you were in favor of peace?"

"We-el, yes, if it were the right kind of peace."

"Just one more question? Are you in favor of sin?"

"Ye-es, if it is the right kind—no wait. Before committing myself I'd like to study the subject a little further."

Of Escapism Ascendant; Soviet, Too, Plans Love Stories and Comedies

By Marjorie Kelly

Reflecting upon the preponderance of escapist films showing this week and considering the many others booked for weeks to come and that word of still more in process of production comes daily to this desk, the possibility occurs that Hollywood has arrived at the conclusion the Russian film studios had reached a year ago about the importance of escapist pictures.

In Larry Lesueur's new book, "Twelve Months That Changed the World," which is the C. B. S. correspondent's journal of his year in Moscow and Kuibyshev, from October, 1941, to October, 1942, he tells of his meeting in September of last year with Mikhail Romm, then chief director of the Soviet motion picture industry. Lesueur told the director, when he said that he was making "war pictures, of course" that winter, that many people didn't like war pictures.

"I hear a lot of complaints around Moscow that the people are getting tired of war pictures all the time. Aren't you going to make any escapist pictures?" he asked.

"Yes," Romm told him. "Our productions in 1943 will include plenty of escapist movies. You see, our problem at the beginning of the war was to make the happy-go-lucky Russian people war-conscious. We had to change their attitude of nonchalance into hatred of the enemy and concentration on the tasks ahead of them. . . . Naturally we are not going to neglect films on military topics but we feel there's a need for comedies and straight love pictures. Our people have worked very hard this year."

"What about the end of the war?" Lesueur asked.

"The end of the war will not necessarily mean that fascism will be dead," Romm said. "Europe has been poisoned by it. We will make antifascist films to be shown everywhere. America must help us. Hollywood makes wonderful pictures."

It would seem that the film industries of the two nations have met the problems both of the early war period and the present state of the conflict, in a very similar manner. It's worth noting that even the Warner Brothers, the film company that said stoutly, "We do not want to be known when the history of this war is written as the film company that made the greatest musical during the war," has come out this season with a number of first-rate escape pictures, such as "The Constant Nymph," now showing at the Earle, and "This Is the Army," which opens in a blaze of glory on the 12th.

Boxoffice Champs

The six boxoffice champions for June will hardly surprise local theatergoers, since they have all been shown locally, and with two exceptions, have had pretty lengthy runs, even for this super-show town.

"Action in the North Atlantic" packed 'em in at the Earle and Metropolitan for three weeks; "Crash Dive" had Tyrone Power fans storming various Loew citadels for three weeks, and "Mission to Moscow" sojourned two weeks at the Earle and one at the Metropolitan. "China," which was at the Earle until last Friday when "The Constant Nymph" edged it out, is booked for a two-week showing at the Metropolitan beginning this Friday.

The exceptions were "Five Graves to Cairo" and "My Friend Flicka," good entertainment both, which rather surprisingly only ran a week here. Even a week here is noteworthy considering that Washington simply has enough theaters to show more than a fraction of top-notchers out of the hundreds of pictures Hollywood releases yearly.

Speaking of "Missions," as we were a moment ago, the picture, which is still arousing a good bit of excitement wherever it is shown, has been playing in Moscow with a couple of minor cuts (we'd like to know what they were!) and it is reported that the Russians like the picture but find some of Hollywood's ideas on Russian life very amusing.

Midgely in Celluloid

Maybe you recognized him—Dick Midgley, now portraying the black-hearted villain of "East Lynne," currently enjoying a highly successful revival run on the Willard Roof, is the burly Marine you saw playing a scene with Elsa Maxwell in "Stage Door Canteen." Minus his gay nineties mustaches, the director-actor made this and a couple of other films just before he returned to Washington to take up the directorial reins for his second season on the Willard Roof. The others are technical films for the Army and Navy, highly confidential jobs dealing with demagnetizing equipment used on our ships against enemy mines. Dick had to study his lines in the office of the film company and on the set, and the script was carefully guarded during the actual shooting.

For Free, Too!

There's a performance of "Hay Fever" at the Crossroads Theater tonight, exclusively for servicemen and women. The amusing Noel Coward comedy plays Wednesday through Saturday for the general public, but the Tuesday performances are for the service only and there's no admission. Local favorites who contribute their talents to the well-staged affair include Catherine Ryan, M. Forney Rees, Virginia McCormick, Gail Benedict, and a number of other able thespians.

A Corsage the Treasury Approves

JOAN LESLIE,

inspired, no doubt, by the spirit of "This Is the Army," in which she is one of the stars, adopted the notion of making war stamps decorative as well as useful to the war effort. Her "bouquet" would buy many bullets. The Warner Brothers Technicolor film version of the Irving Berlin all-soldier musical opens with a gala premiere at the Earle Theater, Thursday night, August 12, for the benefit of Army Emergency Relief

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Emily Wouldn't Know

Hollywood, Aug. 2.—Shirley Ross, who took time out for motherhood (her second son), returns to work in a few weeks at Columbia. With the demand for musicals, Shirley is right in her element and, believe me, her assignment at Columbia is a musical, all right. She will be the leading lady in "Barnyard Canteen." I am greatly intrigued with the idea of this novel musical. The whole action takes place at a canteen built by farmers for the servicemen.

LORETTA YOUNG

In the talent line-up will be Vera Vague, the Mills brothers, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, who has had his discharge from the Army, and a group of vaudeville headliners. Each act will be presented in the canteen, so entertainment plus is on the bill.

Talking with Loretta Young at dinner last week, I thought that she had never looked better—her marriage to Col. Tom Lewis seems to have worked out as well as her career. At this writing she has never had more interesting assignments—one of which is Walter Wanger's "Looking for Trouble." She will have the star part in the Wanger opus, which deals with the WAFS—the Women's Air Ferrying Service. Then there is also Rachel Field's posthumous novel, "And Now Tomorrow," which she will make at Paramount with Joel McCrea before she reports to Walter at Universal. Walter, by the way, is considering changing the name of his movie to "When Ladies Fly."

Walter Huston, who, in my opinion, is one of Hollywood's top actors, gets the muchly discussed role of Ling Tan, the old Chinese farmer, in "Dragon Seed." The fine old man in Pearl Buck's story is one of its most interesting characters. Scenes for "Dragon Seed," which goes before the cameras in September, will be filmed in Calabassas, where a miniature Chinese farm and village have been built. Jack Conway, the director, expects to use an all-Chinese cast, aside from the principals. He leaves for San Francisco and Sacramento in a few days to line them up.

When I ran into Emily Kimbrough at the Joan Blondell-Dick Powell cocktail party I asked the coauthor of "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" if the cast was complete. "Should I know that?" returned Emily. "I'm just a technical adviser!" So, since she couldn't tell me about her cast—I'll tell her that Buddy De Sylva has lined it up as follows: Jim Brown, the wow of "Air Force," shares hero honors with Bill Edwards. Gail Russell plays Cornelia Skinner, and Diana Lynn, of course, is Emily Kimbrough. It's amusing that in the picture Bill loses his real-life girl friend, Gail, to Jim Brown.

HEDDA HOPPER

Dinah Meant Just What She Said

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 2.—"Star Bright," which will star Margaret O'Brien, is the fourth consecutive original story sold to Metro by Isabel Lennart. Another was "Lost Angel," which has just been completed. "Star Bright" is about a Broadway actress and her child. They're hoping Mary Astor will be free to play the mother. . . . Orson Welles will have a midway for his tent show which opens here soon. Midway opens at 6:30 each night, with a typical setup of usual gimcracks to get coin from attendees. It's all for servicemen. Civilians pay. . . . It's either Brian Donlevy or Bob Walker in "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo." . . . Fritz Lang was caught with his priorities down. In "Ministry of Fear," Il Duce figured prominently. Now they're changing the story and reshooting.

MARY ASTOR

She Said It!

The reason Dinah Shore is turning down pictures and radio shows is because she meant what she said. She's arranging with the Government to go overseas to entertain. That, says Dinah, is the most important job any person can do today. . . . Walter Pidgeon chose a nice cool time to start his southern tour of Army camps. He'll cover Mississippi, Alabama, and Tennessee—and when he returns home, he'll think our climate is heaven. . . . Writers are working like mad on a Fred Allen picture. If they ever get it right, he'll do it.

Why Not?

Dorothy Gish will be Mrs. Dodd in "Ambassador Dodd's Diary." It would be mighty smart if some studio starred Lillian and Dorothy. You have no idea how many letters I get about them. Lillian was thought of for the other woman in "Life Boat," but after looking at her face, Alfred Hitchcock decided she hadn't suffered enough for the part. . . . Phyllis Povah, last seen in "The Women," may do the mother in "The Sullivans." . . . Maj. Jack Votion, who's been overseas, is spending a week here with wife and children. . . . It's costing Jimmy Durante plenty to bring his radio show west so he can play in "Tale of Two Sisters."

Turnabout

Renny McEvoy, J. P.'s talented son, sure got a break. Always wanted to act. He stepped into star part written for Eddie Bracken in "Dr. Wassell." He's been doing the Dixie Dugan comic strip for 11 years. In that he's put his own daughter and father. So to get even, J. P. wrote a story called "Mr. Noodle," about a cartoonist. It was bought by Paramount. Now that Renny is clicking with De Mille, I'm wondering whether the studio will dust it off and star him in it. . . . Dick Calron, set for the romantic lead in "Kismet," has become the most tested actor in town. He's already played opposite Zorina, Virginia Bruce, Frances Gifford, and four others. Marlene Dietrich was mighty foolish not to have grabbed the part when it was offered her. It's glamorous, will have a magnificent production, and not too much acting is required.

In the Groove

Bill Bendix, signed for two more at Paramount, just must do "The Hairy Ape" when it's brought back to the screen. I can't think of another actor who would fit it so well. Bendix is about to sign for a fall radio show. In other words, he's making hay while the sun shines. . . . Charlie Foy aims to have a reunion of all the Foys when Eddie gets back from touring camps with Mary Brian. . . . Jimmy Donahue dining with Cary Grant and Barbara Hutton at Mike's. . . . Walter Colmes, my late assistant turned producer, has Donald Dickson, Rosemary Lane, and Johnny Downs set in "Harvest Melody."

Without Aid of Diet

Irene Dunne is giving an imitation of a double duty defense woman. Mornings she dons a parachute for "A Guy Named Joe." Afternoons, she changes into a hoop skirt for "White Cliffs." She's getting thinner by the second . . . Margo is off to Boston with "Behind the Rising Sun." George Givot, who's just finished "Government Girl," has signed a long termer at RKO. He's the actor who wanted to be an Army chaplain, but learned he had to be a preacher for two years before they'd take him . . . Town shocked at sudden passing of Harry Ham. Apparently in perfect health, he had a heart attack, was gone in an hour. Harry was the most popular 10 per center [actor's agent] here, also in London, where his friends were legion . . . Merle Oberon calls her home the hen coop—run entirely by women, chauffeur, gardener, cook, maid. She's lucky having so many . . . A couple of Hollywood dogs got an extensive stripping from Perc Westmore when he went to work on Susie and Farnie. When he'd finished, it gave him an idea for a new haircut. Now he's looking for a glamour girl to try it out on . . . Jimmy Pendleton, ace decorator, to keep busy was painting grapes on mirrors at the John Frederics, when in popped Mrs. Otto Preminger and said, "Gee whiz! You're starting in just like Hitler!"

Broadway Bulletins

New York, Aug. 2.

When Mme. Chiang Kai-shek arrived at the White House for the first time, one of the attendants—who had been instructed to see that the distinguished guest be made comfortable—asked if there was anything she wanted. Madame Chiang thanked him, and said no. "Are you sure?" the attendant insisted. "Isn't there something? Coffee? Tea? Cigarettes? Something?" . . . "Well, then—cigarettes," said Madame Chiang. "A package of 'State Express'" . . . The attendant went to the nearest cigarette shop. "That's an English brand," he was told. "We haven't got them." He phoned other shops, as far as Norfolk, in vain. He tried the British Embassy, and the British Purchasing Commission, but couldn't get a package of "State Express."

MME. CHIANG KAI-SHEK

The attendant then phoned the Eastern ports, to search British ships which had just arrived. None of the sailors aboard those ships had a package of State Express cigarettes. Then he learned that a British ship was expected to arrive in Boston within a few minutes. He arranged for some guards to wait at the dock, board the vessel, and ask the sailors whether they had a package of this brand. One sailor finally exhibited a package of State Express cigarettes. He had just opened the package, and smoked one cigarette. Reluctantly, he surrendered the package.

A special plane flew the cigarettes to Washington. And within five hours after Mme. Chiang Kai-shek had expressed a desire for them, the cigarettes were delivered to her at the White House. . . . She accepted them, and said: "But this isn't a fresh package. It isn't even a full package. And why did it take so long to get them?"

On her way back to China, Madame Chiang stopped at an American base in the Caribbean. She toured the base in a car, and saw an enlisted men's recreation club with a large sign, "Stork Club," over the entrance. "I'm sorry I did not have the opportunity of visiting the Stork Club while I was in New York, but I'll have the opportunity soon" . . . "You mean you're going back to New York?" she was asked . . . "Oh, no," replied Madame Chiang, "I mean we now have a Stork Club in Chungking."

All the photographs and newsreels of General Giraud, during his recent trip here, showed him wearing a white uniform. In none of these poses, however, were his shoes shown. That's because the General wasn't wearing white, but black, shoes . . . He had rushed from Africa in a hurry, and forgot to take his white shoes. And wherever his plane stopped, the General and his staff scoured the local shoe shops, searching for a pair of white shoes to match his uniform. The search was unsuccessful, because no shop keeps such large size shoes in stock.

When Harry Sinclair was jailed in Washington during the Teapot Dome story, his cellmate was a well known Washington bookie, who was serving time for violation of the gambling laws. One day the bookie noticed that Sinclair was asking a visitor to place a bet on a horse for him. "Why don't you let me make book for you?" the bookie suggested. "We can keep track of it, and settle when we get out" . . . Sinclair agreed and made substantial bets every day—bets which were duly recorded in accounts kept. The bookie was released first. "How does our account stand?" Sinclair asked him . . . "You owe me $102,000," said the bookie . . . "All right. You'll hear from me when I get out," Sinclair promised. He was released, and paid.

Army Emergency Relief Does Job for Soldiers

Activities of Organization Have Been Greatly Expanded Since Pearl Harbor

By Elizabeth Henney

"This Is The Army, Mr. Jones," and if your family gets into any kind of a jam you can't handle while you're out at the front, send word to the Army Emergency Relief and they'll do the job for you.

Since the Irving Berlin "This Is The Army" show will open with a great premiere here in Washington on Thursday and the proceeds from the picture will go to the Army Emergency Relief, a lot of people have started asking, "Now just what sort of thing does the AER really do, and where do they help?"

Well, here are some of the answers. Quite a number of years ago an Army Relief organization was formed to do such odd jobs on Army posts as taking care of special nursing expenses for soldiers' families at hospitals when there weren't such facilities provided and the soldier couldn't afford it on his pay; taking care of details and sudden expenses in the case of the death of a soldier, or officer, until the allotment came through for the family; and even in some cases helping, by loans, for putting servicemen's children through school.

However, came Pearl Harbor, and the sudden expansion of the Army, both the organization and the Army realized that Army Relief couldn't cope with the sudden increase in needs for the armed forces. So the Army Relief Society went into a state of suspended animation, until after victory, and the Army Relief was formed.

Mrs. Paige Is Board Member

Mrs. Arthur W. Paige, though former head of the Army Relief Society, was immediately made a member of the board of directors for the AER to blend the background of her training to the present problems.

Headed by Maj. Gen. Irving J. Phillipson, as executive director, and with Gen. John J. Pershing as honorary president, the organization is under the sponsorship of the Army which details officers on the various posts and Army centers to handle the problems which arise.

Probably the clearest picture of what the AER really does for people is provided by a few classic case histories which are hereby quoted—so you'll know.

A recent letter to the AER brought this problem: "I am the wife of an Army private now on duty in North Africa. In another six weeks our baby will be born and I am worried because I do not have the money to pay the bills that fall due then. The allotment of his pay that I receive monthly helps, of course, but it is not enough to take care of this coming event. Is there anything Army Emergency Relief can do to help me through this period?"

There was. They are arranging to provide adequate hospital and medical care so that her baby may start life under the best possible conditions.

Letters Arrive From Many Points

Then again there was the case of a young 18-year-old farm boy. Both of his brothers were in the Army so he was staying home on the farm to support his mother and sister. One day the gas tank on the tractor exploded, seriously burning him, and for awhile it was thought he might lose an arm. The AER found out about it, and provided hospitalization and medical care until he was restored to health.

From a sun-drenched island in the South Pacific came this letter last winter:

"I am writing to ask you if you can aid my mother and young brother and sister who are suffering through a severe winter in New England. They were getting along fine on what money I am able to send, but my brother, who is 5 years old, contracted pneumonia and it took every cent my mother could save to pay for his medical care. Now there isn't any fuel and I am afraid they'll all be down with pneumonia if something isn't done. I'd gladly trade this sun for your snow if I could be there. But that's not possible, of course—so please do what you can."

The Red Cross, which cooperates closely with AER, investigated, found real need, and the AER came through with the fuel supply for the winter, thereby easing the mind of the fighting man at the front.

Requests Are Varied

Tempered with the woeful letters that came is this last one which furnished chuckles for every one who helped handle the case.

"My wife has just presented me with a trio of baby boys. Naturally I was delighted, but the triple event has given me quite a problem. We had saved enough to manage one addition to the family. But three—well, we just didn't plan it that way! We can handle the hospital bill, but it's the extra expense after my family goes home that has me worried. If you can do anything for us, I will thank you, my wife will thank you, little Tom will thank you, little Dick will thank you, and little Harry will thank you."

The Army Emergency Relief provided cribs, carriages and clothes for young Tom, Dick and Harry and were thankful too that they could help solve that problem.

Gen. Emmons Returns Home From Mission

It was a very happy family group that settled down to dinner last evening at 2022 Columbia Road, because Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, absent these several weeks on a misson to England and North Africa, flew in from Miami just in time for the evening meal.

Quite probably one of the main topics under discussion during that supper were the plans for a possible short vacation sometime during the hot month of August. Mrs. Emmons, who has been keeping her nose to the grindstone with war work this summer, has been hoping to get herself and her family away for a short breathing spell, but has delayed plans until the general's return.

In the meantime she has been busy with the Red Cross and Stage Door Canteen work, while their daughter, Mrs. Clayton Burwell, whose husband, Lieutenant Burwell, U. S. Navy is on duty in the Pacific, is working in the Office of Startegic Services.

Fultz-Balionis Troth Made Known; Wedding Monday

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Fultz of Winston-Salem and Asheville, N. C., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss M. Jacqueline Fultz to Lieut. (j. g.) A. E. Balionis, jr., U. S. N. R., of Pittsburgh, Pa., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Balionis of that city.

The wedding will take place on Monday, August 9, at St. Gabriel's Church on Grant Circle. The Rev. William K. Sweeney will officiate at the 10 o'clock morning ceremony.

Lieutenant Balionis is on duty in Washington at the Navy Department.

The Powells Fete Newlyweds

Mr. and Mrs. W. Royce Powell of Washington, Bruce Livie of Baltimore, and Lee Insley of Salisbury, Md., were hosts at a reception in the Pan-American room at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday in honor of Lieut. and Mrs. Ralph M. Newman, whose marriage took place on July 24 in St. Matthew's Church, Msgr. Edward Buckey officiating.

At the wedding ceremony the bride was given in marriage by Mr. Powell. Lieut. Lammot duPont 3d of Wilmington, was best man. Mrs. Newman is from Montreal, Canada.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Newman, who live at 4400 Broad Branch Road, have just returned from a wedding trip to Virginia Hot Springs.

Newlyweds To Reside In Quantico, Va.

Upon their return from a wedding trip, Lieut. Robert James Connor, U. S. M. C., and his bride, the former Miss Virginia Ellen McGinnis will make their home at Quantico, Va.

Their marriage took place in the Post Chapel at Quantico on July 28. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. McGinnis of Charleston, W. Va., and Lieutenant Connor is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lewis Connor of Fairmont. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white waffle pique, a matching picture hat and a corsage of orchids. Mrs. O'Brian Kelley, the matron of honor, was attired in a two-piece pink crepe frock and a corsage of blue delphinium. Jack Connor served his brother as best man.

'See Here, Young Man . . .'

That may be what Capt. Wendell Stuart (above), of Washington, was saying when a roving photographer on the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf-Astoria caught this shot of the Air Corps officer in a party with Miss Peterson of Jamaica, Long Island. Anyway, Miss Peterson seems mightily amused about it all

Surgeon General and Family Not Washington Newcomers

Number One Main Drive at the Army Medical Center has twice been the quarters of the new surgeon General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Norman Thomas Kirk, Mrs. Kirk, and their two daughters, Ann and Jane.

In fact, Washington has been a jumping off place for the Kirks since the last World War when the then Lieut. Col. Kirk was training men in the medical corps at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. After the war, he resumed his permanent rank of Major and was stationed here until 1925. He was back again in 1930 and left again in '34. Between stopovers, the Kirks made their home in such places as Corregidor and Manila in the Philippines and in other outposts, the names of which are now national bywords.

It was in '41 that the Kirks first lived at Number One Maine Drive at Walter Reed, but that stay was short-lived. Col. Kirk left Washington in June, 1942, and went to Battle Creek, Mich., where he guided the establishment of the giant Army medical center there.

For the past year Mrs. Kirk has lived at their Long Island summer home and in Battle Creek. Daughter Ann recently received her degree from the University of California and daughter Jane attended Michigan State. Next semester Jane will transfer again to the University of Maryland, from which she transferred last year.

Gen. Kirk, made a brigadier-general in March and a major-general in June when he succeeded Maj. Gen. James C. Magee, recently made a tour of the African front. Mrs. Kirk is chairman of the Medical Unit of the Army and Navy Auxiliary of the American Red Cross.

Margot Mink To Be Bride Of Capt. Tighe

Mrs. Owen J. Mink announces the engagement of her daughter, Margot, to Capt. Thomas Benton Tighe, U. S. M. C. R.

Miss Mink is the daughter of the late Capt. Owen J. Mink, M. C., U. S. N. She was graduated from Holton-Arms School and attended the Stuart School of Design and George Washington University.

Captain Tighe, the son of Maj. and Mrs. Thomas A. Tighe, U. S. M. C. of Norfolk, Va., was graduated in 1941 from the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service. He has just returned from active duty in Guatemala.

The wedding will take place soon.

Army Nurse Wed To Army Officer At Walter Reed

Lieut. Leonard D. Meyer, U. S. A., and his bride, the former Miss Lois Yoder, lieutenant, Army Nurse Corps, who were married on Saturday at Walter Reed Memorial Chapel, will start on their honeymoon on Wednesday following the bridegroom's graduation from the Adjutant General's School at Fort Washington, Md. They will visit in Pennsylvania, New York and Detroit.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Yoder of Belleville, Pa. She was graduated from the Denver General Hospital, Denver, Colo., and is now stationed at Walter Reed. Lieutenant Meyer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Meyer of Detroit. He is a graduate of Wayne University and the Infantry School. He was formerly stationed in Washington.

Chaplain John F. Volk officiated at the wedding ceremony held at 4 o'clock and attended by a few close friends. Miss Wofford Langhmiller was maid of honor and Lieut. Joseph C. Dise, U. S. A., was best man.

Engagement Told

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson C. Van Duzer of Middletown, N. Y., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Tryntje Van Duzer, to Isham Lavender Martin of Washington, now stationed in Orlando, Fla. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Martin. Miss Van Duzer is a senior at Rollins College in Florida.

Those Fighting Weemses—Formerly 13, Now 12—Have Newspaper All Their Own; Family Journal Carries Latest Weems Data From All Over World

When 13 members of one family serve in one war—it's news. Their assignments, promotions, adventures and activities also are news—enough news for a newspaper all on its own.

And that's exactly what Weemsana is. It's a newspaper that comes out ever so often, giving last minute notes on service members of the famous Weems family, now represented in Uncle Sam's armed forces by soldiers, sailors and marines, ranging all the way from general to private in the Army and from lieutenant (j. g.) to commander in the Navy. There's also a WAAC in the outfit, Capt. Mary Catherine Weems, assistant commandant of the WAAC Training School at Daytona Beach, Fla. A lithograph, presenting all members of the Weems family in the armed forces and sent out with the last issue of Weemsana, indicates that Mary Catherine has pin-up prettiness that shows up nicely alongside the handsome male faces of the Weems fighting clan.

Maj. Slayden Is the Editor

I've seen two copies of Weemsana, and you can take my word for it—it's the most fascinating account of a fighting family that has ever come my way. Compiled and edited by Maj. William M. Slayden of the military intelligence and general staff school at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. (he's also a member of the Weems family), Weemsana is sent regularly to Washington to Mrs. W. E. Pattison French, the former Evelyn Weems. Latest she received came out last month, and it is chock full of up-to-date data and anecdotes about the fabulous family now—scattered all over the globe.

One of the youngest members, Aviation Cadet Joe B. (Billy) Weems 3d, stationed at Douglas, Ga., admirably touched off the salient sentiment of Weemsana in a letter published in the second issue. Referring to the family, he had this to say:

"In the last year and a half the war took a small piece of thread and lassoed us. We were all widely separated and the loop was large and the thread was thin. As the war progressed the string has tightened around us, the loop getting smaller and the string bigger. I believe now the small string has turned to a thick steel band that will never be broken, and I am very proud to be one of the family."

When the latest issue of Weemsana was sent out, it carried news of 13 members in Uncle Sam's uniforms. Subsequent issues will give reports of only 12; for Capt. Philip Van Horne Weems of the Ninth Marines was killed in New Zealand last month. His father is Comdr. P. V. H. Weems, international authority on celestial navigation, who is now a convoy commodore with headquarters at Annapolis.

An especially outstanding member of the family is Brig. Gen. George Hatton Weems (called "Uncle General" in the Weems periodical). Decorated for gallantry four times in World War I, and now serving as assistant commandant at the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga., he was recently given the Sullivan Award for outstanding achievement at Davidson College. It was there that he was professor of military science and tactics back in the days when he was a mere captain.

Lieut. Thomas Weems, United States Army Air Corps, now in his Tennessee home awaiting orders, received the Distinguished Service Cross for his activity as navigator of a torpedo plane which helped sink a Japanese aircraft carrier in the battle of Midway. He is a brother of Lieut. John Newell Weems, Air Corps reserve, now stationed at Brownsville, Tex., and a cousin of Lieut. (j. g.) George Thackery Weems, who won a Silver Star while attached to the U. S. S. McCalla in the Pacific. He is now training to be a pilot in Dallas.

One Member Writes Poem

From Lieut. (j. g.) James A. Weems, U. S. N., now stationed with a bomb disposal unit in Hawaii, came a poetic contribution for the July issue of Weemsana. The poem, written when the author was in Iceland some time ago, is a fitting conclusion for both that copy of the periodical, and this column. Entitled "Victory," it goes as follows:

We shall not fail till peace enshrouds
The land? The Sea? The sun-split clouds;
Till those who fall reach back and give
The touch by which their world will live.

We question not the breadth or length
Or road we trod, nor storm-marred sea;
We know that God will give us strength
That right will bring us victory.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

THOUGH it hasn't got all the publicity of the coal mine strike, one of the toughest labor problems F. D. R. faces is the threatened strike of 1,100,000 nonoperating railroad workers.

What the President is up against is overriding one of his top and ablest administrators, Judge Fred Vinson, new economic stabilizer, or facing a possible strike of railroad clerks, machinists, telegraphers and shop workers.

What happened was that a special emergency panel appointed by the President recommended a blanket wage increase for the nonoperating railway workers. But Economic Stabilizer Vinson turned the recommendation down as inflationary and contrary to the War Labor Board's "Little Steel" wage ceiling formula.

Vinson has compiled a careful study of wages and prices, contends that prices actually have been rolled back more than labor realizes; also that labor's total "take," figuring in overtime rather than just the hourly wage rate, is higher than the price rise.

So he "held the line" against the special panel's recommendation.

Whereupon William Leiserson, chairman of the Mediation Board, and George Harrison, head of the Railway Clerks, went to the White House and held a long session endeavoring to overrule Judge Vinson. They came away confident that they had succeeded. The President seemed sympathetic, and Harrison reported back to this union that he was on their side.

Actually, however, the President sent a note to Judge Vinson asking him to check regarding the situation, and it doesn't look as if he would overrule his economic stabilizer.

If he stands pat, the President and the Nation faces the danger of a serious railway strike. However, White House advisers are confident that rail workers will be more patriotic than John L. Lewis; also are shrewd enough to see the terrific national reaction against labor which resulted from the coal miners' strike.

Milo Perkins' Future

ONE of the really top men in the war picture, whose advice is generally heeded, telephoned Leo Crowley the other day regarding Milo Perkins. He urged that Crowley, now administering the Economic Warfare duties of both Jesse Jones and Henry Wallace, should retain Milo Perkins, former executive director of BEW under Wallace.

Crowley listened sympathetically to his friend's advice, but replied:

"Milo's done a tremendous job against terrific obstacles, and he's had a very unlucky break as a reward for it. I would like to keep him on because I know he would be of great value to me. But I have virtual orders to get rid of him."

The orders, naturally, could have come from only one place—the White House.

Note: Jesse Jones really hated Milo Perkins more than the Vice President. Both from Texas, Perkins worked his way up from a job with a grain bag company, and Jesse referred to him as "that smart little bag salesman." Perkins, whose only two sons have been killed, was one of the most passionate pushers of the war effort in all Washington. He is now going to Mexico for a rest, after which he is through with government for keeps.

'Father' Baruch

GAUNT, gray Bernie Baruch, whose relentless prodding of the war effort has saved more lives than anyone can estimate, is worried over a lot of things besides tanks, airplanes and machine guns. Among other things he is worried over the human problems of readjusting the lives of people who have flooded the cities, who have been thrown out of joint by the war.

Sitting on his park bench in Lafayette Park, where he holds "office" conferences, Bernie sees the stream of girls, thousands of them from all over the U. S. A., dumped into Government offices, into crowded boarding houses, and wonders what will happen to them when the war is over.

Baruch won't tell you—but his friends will—about how he handled this problem after the last war.

He had employed several thousand clerks and stenographers in his War Industries Board, and after the Armistice he began to worry about whether these girls were going back to their homes or would remain in the exciting cities.

So he sent each girl a letter thanking her for the time and loyal work she had given her country. And as a hint that she should go back to her mother he suggested: "Anyone who will apply at my office can receive a railroad ticket back home."

Baruch also attached to each letter a $10 bill.

The railroad tickets were paid for out of his own pocket, since the Government does not pay for personal transportation, and it cost Baruch many thousands of dollars. He was a little fearful that some of the girls might have taken the tickets, then turned them in to the railroad. However, he hoped that he might have helped to get at least a fair proportion out of the city and back home.

Merry-Go-Round

FRIENDS of Wendell Willkie have been probing G. O. P. Gov. Earl Warren of California about running as vice presidential candidate on a Willkie ticket . . . One thing President Roosevelt talked to President Avila Camacho about while in Mexico was permitting 12,000 Polish refugees to enter Mexico from Europe. Mexico has consented . . . Congressman Mike Monroney of Oklahoma is trying to rent Bill Bullitt's Washington house now that the former ambassador will run for Mayor of Philadelphia . . . Philadelphia's Jacob Billikopf recalls a statement by Gifford Pinchot: "I have just so much steam in me and if I put it in too many pipes, not one will get enough heat." "That," says Billikopf, "may be the trouble with many-jobbed Jesse Jones." . . . Burnet Hershey of the Overseas Press Club was one of the first to predict categorically that Sicily would be a complete pushover if the Allies invaded . . . John Carlson's book "Under Cover" on American fascism is really going places.

D. C. Gunner Helped Save 'Fortress' Attacked by Nazis

How two wounded sergeants—one of them a Washington man—aboard a severely damaged Flying Fortress stood by their guns and beat off German fighter planes until the bomber could make a successful sea landing, was disclosed yesterday by the War Department.

CLEMENTS

The local man, who has received the Purple Heart and Air Medal for the action, is Staff Sergt. Edward F. Clements, husband of Mrs. Ruby Clements of 3023 Fourteenth Street Northwest, a waist gunner. Also credited for saving the lives of the crew of the B-17, "Myrtle," is Tech. Sergt. Edward W. Maslowski of Cloquet, Minn.

The "Myrtle" had made its bomb run at St. Nazaire, France, and was heading back for its English base when flak struck its control cables. It soon became apparent that landing at sea—as near England as possible—would be necessary. As the crew began tossing articles overboard to lighten the load, the Focke-Wulfs swooped down unexpectedly.

The two gunners were wounded in the attack, but when the Nazis struck again, they were still at their posts. Sergeant Clements, severely wounded in one arm, kept a stream of bullets on the attacking planes while Tech. Sergt. Harold B. Koukol of Berwyn, Ill., came to his aid and applied a tourniquet.

Receiving first details of her husband's action from The Post yesterday, Mrs. Clements said she was "as proud of him as I can be, but I can't help being worried about him." He has written her that he is saving the bullet which struck him for a souvenir and that he expected to return to active duty soon.

A Washington native, Clements, 34, has served with the Merchant Marine, Marine Corps and National Guard. He was at one time employed by Judd & Detweiler, printers, and as a chauffeur for Brig. Gen. Albert M. Cox. His mother, Mrs. Tinnie Clements, resides at 411 Ninth Street Northwest.

3 D. C. Youths, One Killed, Awarded Oak Leaf Cluster

Three Washington youths—one a war casualty and one a prisoner—have received Oak Leaf Clusters to Air Medals, the War Department announced yesterday in releasing a list of decorations for outstanding achievements in flights in the Northwest African and European theaters.

DONNELLY

Details of the citations were not released.

Cited from this arear were: Staff Sergt. William M. Brooks, son of Mrs. Lillian Brooks of 1819 G Street Northwest, eighth Oak Leaf Cluster; Staff Sergt. William L. Donnelly, husband of Mrs. Marjorie Lee Donnelly of 48 I Street Northwest, who was reported killed in action on April 23, and Sergt. Earl B. Willis, son of Mrs. Gertrude Willis of 618 Ninth Street Northeast, who has recently been reported a prisoner of war, first Oak Leaf Cluster.

Brooks, who previously had been decorated for his work as bomber radio operator in the Tunisian campaign, was born in Reading, Pa., June 29, 1920. He attended Roosevelt High School and Young Harris Preparatory School in Georgia. Holder of a commercial license at the age of 17, he went to Denver, Colo., to do ground work with United Air Lines as he tried to qualify as a radio operator. He was employed by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. before enlisting in the Air Corps in October, 1941.

BROOKS

Donnelly, who took part in the publicized "skip bombing" of Axis ships last April, served for eight months in the RCAF.

A native of Lynchburg, Va., Willis came here with his family 22 years ago and attended Stuart Junior High School. He was employed as a carpenter's helper and worked in Kann's department store. Enlisting in the Army Air Corps in September, 1939, he went on overseas duty last fall.

Also cited were Capt. Clarence S. Towles, jr., of Reedville, Va., seventh Oak Leaf Cluster, and Capt. Mercer P. Davis of Blacksburg, Va., sixth Oak Leaf Cluster.

I Said "Can You Match It?"
. . . AND THEY DID!

"It all took place at The Hecht Co. . . . right at the cosmetic counter. 'Can you match it?' . . . I said, holding up my lipstick. 'Can you match it with rouge and nail polish?' The saleslady took a quick look and said: 'Nothing to it . . . that's Dorothy Gray.' And quick as a sneeze there it was in front of me—the rouge and nail polish I wanted.

"But that's not all. You should see the perky white flower I bought for my hair. And I picked up the cutest pair of pearl earrings—found a honey of a blouse, too.

"Then I did some counter-shopping. Saw some adorable dickies . . . noticed some tailored slacks I'd give an eye-tooth to own . . . and jingle-jangle bracelets I'd been wanting. Can scarcely wait 'til I get my next clothes allowance.

"That night I put on my new duds . . . strutted in front of Jim. He said: 'Darling — you're matchless. How about a dinner and the movies?' Who was I to say nay—since it was the first time in a month we had an entire evening out. Couldn't help wondering if a big share of the credit shouldn't go to the accessories I bought at The Hecht Co."
